CENTRAL CRIMINAL COURT

MAN SEEN ALIVE AFTER "DEATH"

MURDER TRIAL EVIDENCE

HENRY ATTENDED BOYLE SHOW

(BEFORE MR. JUSTICE GAVAN DUFFY.)

THE trial of Thomas J. Kelly, who is charged with having murdered a returned Irish-American, Patrick Henry, at Boyle, Co. Roscommon, on or about September 10, 1935, entered on its second week yesterday.

Mr. Martin Maguire, K.C., and Mr. Kevin Haugh (instructed by the Chief State Solicitor) are prosecuting; and Mr. Brereton Barry and Mr. R. S. Hogan (instructed by Mr. C. E. Callan, solicitor) are for the defence.

Mr. S. Keegan, an official of the Bank of Ireland, Dublin, said that the accused man had started an account in the bank with a lodgment of £700. He drew out the last of that sum in June, 1933.

Paul Macpherson, Quarry street, Boyle, said that he had seen Henry at Boyle about 3.45 p.m. on the day of the show. Henry was standing beside the exhibits, and was looking towards the jumping.

In reply to Mr. Haugh, the witness said that he had not told the Guards that he had seen Henry alive and well on the show day. He had never been asked. When he saw, after the proceedings in Boyle, that Kelly was charged with murdering Henry on September 10 he knew that he could not have done it, as the dead man was alive on the 12th.

George Johnston, Boyle, said that he had no doubt that he saw Henry at Boyle Show on September 12.

In reply to Mr. Maguire, he said that although he had not gone to the Civic Guards about the case, he was prepared to assist in every way he could.

Edward Farrell, a creamery manager, said that he was certain that he had seen Henry on September 12, because he remembered saying to Henry: "Good morning, Mr. Henry; it is early you are up," and Henry replied: "It is—I am going to see the bulls."

In reply to Mr. Maguire, who suggested that he had not been sure of his age when he had been cross-examined at a previous trial, the witness said that he had not got a birth certificate then.

Mr. Justice Gavan Duffy—What year were you born?—To the best of my recollection it was in 1882. (Laughter.)

SAW HENRY AT BANK

Edward Johnston said that he was at present employed at Bangor, Co. Down, having left Boyle last year. He had seen Henry on September 12 standing at the corner of the Northern Bank.

Mr. Maguire (cross-examining)—Did you not say to your own solicitor, Mr. Forde, that you could not be sure about Henry?—I did, but I also told him I was almost sure it was Henry.

Further questioned by Mr. Hogan, witness said that he had no interest in the present case—good, bad, or indifferent.

Robert Irwin, gardener, Boyle, said that he did not know the accused man, but he knew Henry. He had no doubt that on September 12, at Boyle Show, he saw the dead man on two occasions. The first time he was in company with a stranger.

Cross-examined, the witness said that he remembered the show, as it was only in 1935 that he had exhibited at it. The photograph produced by counsel for the prosecution resembled Patrick Henry.

Kathleen McPherson, Boyle, said that on September 12, 1935, she saw Henry at Boyle Show. He was smoking, and had his hands in his pockets.

Mary McPherson said that she also saw Henry at Boyle Show.

In reply to Mr. Haugh the witness said that after Kelly had been returned for trial she had not mentioned that she had seen Henry at Boyle, because she did not want to have anything to do with the case.

The Court adjourned until to-day at 10.30 a.m.

FATAL MOTOR ACCIDENT

INQUEST ADJOURNED

Dr. D. A. MacErlean, City Coroner, opened an inquest in Steeven's Hospital, Dublin, yesterday, into the death of James Fox, "Banba," Clondalkin, which occurred on Saturday night following injuries sustained in a collision with a motor lorry.

The Coroner stated that the deceased man was knocked down on the Dublin-Naas road by a lorry, the property of the Clondalkin Paper Mills, and he died within a few hours of his admission to the hospital.

Dr. P. Patton, house surgeon in the hospital, stated that the deceased man never regained consciousness and was suffering from double fracture of the skull.

On the application of the Civic Guards the Coroner adjourned the inquest, adding that, as he did not know when it might be re-opened, he would discharge the jury.

Mr. Proud, solicitor, appeared for the next-of-kin.

FATAL ACCIDENTS

CHILD AND AGED WOMAN KILLED

Catherine Doyle (73), of South Cumberland street, Dublin, was knocked down by a motor car at Westland row last night, and died shortly after admission to Sir Patrick Dun's Hospital.

Elizabeth Humphrey (8), of Font Hill, Palmerstown, County Dublin, fell from a tramway car on her way home from school yesterday, and received injuries from which she died shortly after admission to Steevens's Hospital.

Austin O'Donnell, an Automobile Association patrol, was involved in an accident with a motor lorry while walking with his bicycle near Tallaght, County Dublin, yesterday, and was taken to the Meath Hospital with a fractured leg and a dislocated shoulder.

EASTER WEEK MEMORIAL

DEFENCE CASE OPENED

RIGHT TO SIGN ROLL OF HONOUR

(BEFORE THE PRESIDENT OF THE HIGH COURT AND A JURY.)

The hearing of the action of Joseph Reynolds, Donnellan avenue, Mount Brown, Dublin, against Gearoid O hUllachain, Moibhi road, Glasnevin, Dublin, a member of the Easter Week Memorial Committee, Four Courts Garrison Area; John F. Shouldice, Inverness road, Fairview, Dublin, secretary, and Nicholas Laffan, Huxley Crescent, Cork street, Dublin, chairman of the same committee, was continued.

The plaintiff claimed damages against all the defendants for alleged conspiracy and libel, and against the first-named defendant for alleged slander. He stated that he was an applicant for a pension under the Military Service (Pensions) Act, 1934, and that the Central Easter Week Memorial Committee approved his claim to have his name inscribed on the roll of honour of those who took part in the insurrection of Easter week, 1916. Gearoid hUllachain stated at a meeting of the Easter Week Memorial Committee, Four Courts Garrison Area, that he was not satisfied that Mr. Reynolds was entitled to sign the roll of honour, and the defendants published that statement in a letter to Mr. Joseph O'Connor, chairman of the Central Easter Week Memorial Committee, and inserted it on the minutes of the Garrison Area Committee.

These words meant, alleged the plaintiff, that he had attempted to obtain a pension under false pretences. The defendants had, he stated, conspired to injure him in his reputation and credit.

The defendants denied the alleged conspiracy and pleaded that the words complained of were incapable of bearing the meaning alleged by the plaintiff. They further pleaded that if the words were spoken and published, they were spoken and published bona fide, without malice, in the belief that they were true, and in circumstances that made them privileged.

Mr. Albert E. Wood, K.C.; Mr. J. A. McCarthy, K.C., and Mr. Alex Lynn (instructed by Messrs. Lehane and Hogan) appeared for the plaintiff; and Mr. J. A. Costello, K.C.; Mr. Fionan Lynch, and Mr. P. J. Burke (instructed by Mr. John S. O'Connor) for the defendants.

The case for the plaintiff had closed last Thursday.

The defendant, Nicholas Laffan, was examined by Mr. Costello and said that he had served with the Irish Volunteers from 1914, and that early in 1915 he met the plaintiff, who was then in the Fianna. In Easter Week, 1916, witness was on active service in the Brunswick street-Church street area. He was in charge of that area from the Monday morning until 2.30 o'clock on the following morning, and never during that time did he see the plaintiff going to or coming from the area headquarters. He never saw the plaintiff during the entire of that week.

PENSION CLAIMS

The witness gave details of the procedure which, he said, was followed by the Garrison Area Committee in investigating the claims of those who said they were entitled to sign the roll of honour, and stated that the same procedure was followed in the case of the plaintiff as in the case of all other claimants. The plaintiff did not satisfy the committee in regard to his Easter Week service. He never had any ill-feeling towards the plaintiff.

Cross-examined by Mr. McCarthy he said that he knew that Barney Mellows had vouched for the plaintiff, and there was no reason why that should have been omitted from the minutes of the Garrison Area. Mr. Mellows was engaged at one point during Easter Week, and could not vouch for what took place in another area. The plaintiff had two certificates, but was asked to furnish further particulars.

Mr. McCarthy—Do you now, in view of what has been sworn here, admit or deny that Reynolds had Easter Week service?—I would not be prepared to answer that question at the moment. We are considering information now that we never had before.

The witness denied that, so far as he was aware, there was a vendetta by the Garrison Committee against the plaintiff, and he said that he did not believe that anyone of the Committee had a "down" on the plaintiff.

Before any discussion of a final character in respect of plaintiff's claim took place Mrs. O'Connell, who had appeared before the Committee in 1935, told them, he said, that she had seen the plaintiff in Easter Week.

Mr. McCarthy—How many men vouched for by people of repute, like Mr. Mellowes, Mr. Staines and Senator Duggan, were refused leave to sign the roll of honour?—I could not answer that right off.

Were there any others except Reynolds?—I cannot recollect a case at the moment. There were over three hundred cases to be considered.

SENTENCED TO DEATH

The defendant, John F. Shouldice, stated, in reply to Mr. Burke, that in Easter Week of 1916 he was in the North King street-Church street area, and that he had been sentenced to death for taking part in the insurrection. A number of applications from claimants to sign the roll of honour had been "turned down." He had been present at all the meetings of the Committee at which Mr. Reynolds's case was discussed, and at none of them did he see any indication of spleen or animosity against Mr. Reynolds on the part of any member of the Committee.

The witness was cross-examined by Mr. Lynn about the relationship between the Central Committee and the Garrison Area Committee, and said that he would not say that when the Garrison Area Committee sent the case of an applicant to the Central Committee for their decision the Garrison Area Committee was finished with the case.

Joseph O'Connor, examined by Mr. Costello, said that it was not necessary to be a 1916 Easter Week man to be a member of the Central Easter Week Memorial Committee, of which he was Chairman. Garrison Area Committees were not subordinate to the Central Committee, and the Four Courts Garrison Committee, in investigating the claim of Mr. Reynolds, were carrying out a function assigned to them.

Cross-examined by Mr. Lynn, he said that in issuing armlets to men to attend the unveiling of the statue in the General Post Office, on the occasion of the commemoration, great care was taken to see that only "1916 men" got them.

Eamon Martin, Officer Commanding Dublin Brigade of the Fianna in 1916, said that he knew the plaintiff in 1917, and always had been friendly with him. Plaintiff never had told him that he had taken part in the insurrection of 1916. Fianna certificates had been prepared and signed by Madame Marcievicz and him, but none ever had been issued, as they were captured in a raid at the end of 1917 or the beginning of 1918. He did not know anybody in Ireland who had one. He never got one himself.

Witness said that there had been some talk to the effect that Gearoid O hUllachain was not giving enough time to the Fianna, and was becoming more attached to the Volunteers, and that O hUllachain said he would not give up his connection with the Volunteers, but it was not true that O hUllachain was dismissed from the position of Quartermaster-General of the Fianna. He was succeeded in that position by Mr. Reynolds.

Cross-examined, he said that if Mr. Mellows, Mr. Staines and Senator Duggan had stated that the plaintiff served in Easter Week, 1916, he would not doubt their word.

The hearing had not concluded when the Court adjourned until to-day.

THE ROTUNDA

LECTURE BEFORE OLD DUBLIN SOCIETY

Mr. P. J. Stevenson read a paper, entitled "Rotunda Memories," at the meeting of the Old Dublin Society in the Lord Mayor's Court last night, when Alderman T. Kelly, T.D., presided.

Mr. Stevenson said that the Rotunda had developed on a small patch of waste ground just outside the city of the time. The gardens were first bought and laid out, and then the lying-in hospital was built by Dr. Mosse to a design by Cassels, whose pupil, Enson, later designed the Round Room. The hospital, which was the first of its kind in the British Isles, became known as the Rotunda Lying-in Hospital from that time. The revenue of the hospital was derived from balls held in the Round Room and promenades in the gardens, and at one of the grand balls on the Feast of St. Patrick King George IV. was the principal guest. Meetings of Protestants who were in favour of Catholic Emancipation were held in the Round Room, and another great meeting there was the Repeal levee held in honour of the Repeal prisoners on their release in 1845. Charles Dickens gave readings from "David Copperfield" and the Pickwick Papers" there, and the first oireachtas of the Gaelic League was held in it in 1897.

BIG ATTENDANCE AT AIR-TRAVEL FILM

During last week Aer Lingus, Teoranta, staged one of the most successful exhibitions Dublin has known for a long time. At the Permanent Exhibition of Irish Goods, 3 St. Stephen's Green, an effective window display attracted much attention, interest being centred on the main feature of the display—a skeleton route map showing direct connections with numerous Continental points which can be reached in remarkably short time.

Concurrent with the display Aer Lingus showed an air-travel film each evening from 4 p.m. to 7.30 p.m. The film, which dealt with the European and Far-Eastern services of Messrs. K.L.M. Royal Dutch Airlines, was well received, and drew large and enthusiastic audiences. Well over 1,000 visitors were admitted to the showing of the film during the week, and the promoters feel that considerable advance has been made in the creation of air-consciousness in this country.

ELLENFIELD HOUSING SCHEME DELAY

At a special meeting of the Housing Committee of the Dublin Corporation to-night a resolution will be submitted asking Mr. Lemass, Minister for Industry and Commerce, to point out where the Housing Committee of the Corporation has "failed in its duty."

At a meeting of the Committee yesterday the Lord Mayor said that there were not enough men employed on the direct labour scheme at Ellenfield.

The manager of the scheme said that owing to the plumbers' strike it was impossible to employ any more men at present.

Mr. T. Kelly, T.D., Chairman, said that everything humanly possible was being done on the question of housing.

It was decided that the Housing Sub-Committee should meet the plumbers to see if a settlement could not be arrived at in connection with Corporation Housing schemes.

THE AMERICAN MARKETS

FRESH BREAK IN PRICES

GENERAL LOSSES TOUCH FIVE DOLLARS

FROM REUTER'S CORRESPONDENT.

NEW YORK, Monday.

The poor showing of the steel industry and the trouble in the motor manufacturing field, together with a lack of encouragement from Congress and falling hopes that the special session will provide some aid for American business—these were the main dispiriting factors in another decline in Wall Street prices over a broad front to-day.

The market encountered heavy selling in the final operations, including "out-of-town" and professional liquidation, and the "ticker" fell three minutes behind transactions. Quotations ended at their lowest of the day, numerous losses, extending to five dollars—and in a few instances considerably more—being recorded in a turnover of 1,520,000 shares.

The opening was easy, and prices immediately turned lower, with the leading issues during the morning approaching last week's low levels. The list was generally down at this juncture, the Industrials, Minings, and Chemicals showing losses ranging to two points.

In the early afternoon the market moved slightly above its worst, but the undertone was heavy, and prices wilted under slow, but persistent selling. Rallying tendencies in the later dealings were of a feeble nature, and quickly evaporated under further selling. The close was weak.

Sterling exchange opened ¼ down at 5.00¼, and declined during the morning to 5.00⅜. The rate remained at this level in the afternoon, but finally improved slightly and closed ¼ lower, compared with the previous close, at 5.00¼.

Silver was unchanged at 44⅞.

DUBLIN DULL

LAND BONDS HIGHER

BRITISH INDUSTRIALS WEAK

On the Dublin Stock Exchange yesterday most interest was paid to British Industrials, which showed sharp relapses on only a little liquidation; local issues, however, held fairly steady.

The Free State Funds were firmer for choice. The Second National Loan rose 5s., and Land Bonds were supported up to 107¾ x.d., and the 4 per cent. Bonds to 100¾ x.d. The Third National Loan fell 10s. to 109. War Loan continued dull, and closed 5s. 3d. down on the day.

Banks were quiet and featureless.

In view of the weakness of other leading Industrials it was wonderful how well Guinness Ordinary were maintained, and they were the turn harder at 124s.. Distillers Ordinary came in sellers, and relapsed 2s. 6d. to 100s.

Great Southern Debenture moved up to 86, and Alliance Gas Ordinary, after an easier start, recovered to 34s. 3d.

Ranks (Ireland) Ordinary and Abbey Clothing Preference eased slightly, but Cement Debenture improved to 103½. Ever Ready (Ireland) Ordinary, Irish C.S. Buildings, T. and C. Martin Ordinary, and Pye (Ireland) Ordinary marked small shrinkages.

British Industrials failed to withstand a fresh outburst of selling: B.A.T. Ordinary relapsed 3s. 9d., and Imperials slumped to 143s. 9d. Textiles were busier, but generally weak, and Courtaulds fell sharply to 43s. 6d.

Imperial Chemicals lost 1s. 3d., and Vickers Ordinary gave way to 22s. 1½d. Oils were very depressed, and Shell Transport Ordinary dipped to 89s., and Anglo-Iranian Ordinary to 71s. 9d. Other leading Industrials reflected the prevailing depression from the other side, but mostly in nominal markings.

LONDON WEAK

HEAVY FALLS IN INDUSTRIALS

The start of the second week of the account witnessed no change in conditions on the London Stock Markets, and, if any thing, the general atmosphere was even more despondent than of late. Liquidation on local and Continental account, with provincial selling, continued, and as there was little buying power to check the downward movement, further heavy losses were marked in all directions. Industrials again suffered badly, many of the principal issues declining by several shillings, while Oil shares became weak to the accompaniment of fears regarding increased competition from independent companies and talk of a coming cut in petrol prices. Severe losses also occurred in the Kaffir section, while the investment groups weakened under the lead of gilt-edged stocks. Following the suspension over the week-end of remittances from the Brazilian Foreign Debt Service, dealings in the Bonds were a matter of negotiation, and at the close quotations showed falls ranging up to £11 per cent.

BRITISH FUNDS.

Gilt-edged securities held up fairly well at first, but small sales met with little resistance, and dulness quickly enveloped the market. Values were scaled down rather smartly in the late dealings, and eventually Old Consols were ¼ lower, while Loans and War Loan were other weak spots.

FOREIGN BONDS.

Foreign Bonds were unsettled by the news from Brazil, and the market was in a depressed state throughout the session. Brazilians failed to register any recovery during the afternoon, and the 5 per cent. Funding of 1898 finished at 57, against 68 on Friday last, while the 5 per cent. Funding (1914) receded from 57 to 48. Chinese Government Bonds formed another weak section, and point losses were the rule among Japanese issues. Europeans were chiefly notable for a fresh set-back in Germans, but Greek Bonds also gave way, and French Fours eased to 12¾.

RAILS.

Owing to the weakness of surrounding groups generally and of Gilt-Edged in particular, British Rails were easily affected by a modest volume of sales, and the junior stocks gave an especially disappointing display. Great Western Ord. dropped 1½ to 59½, while L.M.S. Ord. and Southern Defd. lost 1 and ¾, respectively. Declines also occurred frequently in the Foreign Rail group, Argentines being upset by the debt default news. Colonials managed to keep fairly steady, but most American Rails lost ground.

INDUSTRIALS.

Industrials moved down from the outset, and as liquidation showed no sign of diminishing, the market became weak all round towards the end. Shipping shares were marked down sharply, and substantial losses were customary in the Iron and Steel. Electrical Equipment, and Brewery groups Rayons formed another particularly dull section, and the leading Motor shares fell heavily. Weakness also characterised Building shares, and dull features in other directions included Murex, British Oxygen, Triplex, Imperial Chemical, and Turner and Newalls.

MINES.

In the Mining Market, Kaffirs were offered from Cape and Continental centres from the outset, and as local operators were disposed to reduce commitments, lower prices were quoted throughout the list. Some of the leading Diamond shares also sustained severe losses, while Copper shares followed Rhokana Corporation to reduced levels.

THE MONEY MARKET

GOLD DEARER

The turnover in the Bullion market was restricted to the very small amount of £232,000 of gold. This was effected at 140s. 1d. per fine ounce, an advance of 1d. on Saturday's price. The premium over the dollar parity included in the price remained at 1s. 1½d., with the dollar rate at the fixing 5.0040.

Money was in quiet demand at ½ p.c. and discount rates were again quoted ⅞ p.c.

Silver was unchanged at 19½d. a standard ounce cash and 19½d. forward.

The continued firmness of the franc held principal interest in the Foreign Exchange market yesterday. The homeward drift of French capital from foreign centres was continued, while bear speculators in francs were again reducing commitments. The demand for spot francs was met by the French "control," which preferred a fresh addition to its foreign exchange reserves to an improvement in the rate, but further reductions in forward discounts gave positive evidence of the firm undertone of the market. Market quarters expressed surprise that the franc should have weathered the disclosure of the French arms conspiracy so successfully, and its continued firmness in face of these developments is widely cited as proof of the steady restoration of confidence in the currency.

The dollar developed a slightly firmer tendency yesterday. The firmer tone of the American exchange extended to a number of European currencies, closing quotations usually proving rather less favourable to London on the day.

THE INDUSTRIAL MARKET

FURTHER ALL-ROUND WEAKNESS

Another bout of selling both in London and from the provinces was encountered in the Industrial market yesterday, and with practically no support forthcoming dealers had no alternative but to mark prices down still further. A mild rally was seen towards the close, but, even so, substantial declines were again recorded.

With Wall street still in rather uncertain mood the Trans-Atlantic Counters lost further ground, but they closed somewhat steadier in the late "street" dealings. U.S. Steels fell to 49¾ at one time, and, although a rally occurred to 50¾, they finished 2 down on the day. "Emmies" sagged to 16s. 10½d., while E. K. Cole weakened to 8s.

IRON AND STEELS ON OFFER.

Cable and Wireless stocks derived no benefit from the traffic index, the Pref. losing 1 at 99½ and the Ord. 1¼ at 21.

Iron and Steel shares were again offered on an unwilling market. Tube Investments continued depressed, further falling 2s. to 76s. 3d., and Stewarts and Lloyds Defd. weakened 9d. to 33s. 9d. Liquidation of weak positions in India was responsible for a fall of ⅛ to 2¾ in Indian Irons.

MOTORS MARKED DOWN.

The downward trend of Electrical Equipments was unchecked, some further appreciable declines resulting from the day's business. Generals were a weak spot, falling 2s. 6d. to 73s. 6d.

Few issues in the Motor section escaped the general marking down of prices, and declines in most cases were out of all proportion to the volume of business. Leylands finished ⅛ lower at 5¾. Standards were 1s. 3d. down at 24s. 9d., and Morris were 1s. 6d. lower at 31s. 3d. Fords showed a loss of 1s. 3d. at 20s. 9d., as did Austins at 31s. 3d.

Despite the weakness in other sections, Aircrafts managed to retain a comparatively steady appearance. De Havillands, however, were dull at 32s. 6d.

TOBACCOS FALL SHARPLY.

Breweries were subject to scattered realisations from the provinces. Distillers changed hands down to 98s. at one time, eventually closing 2s. 3d. lower on the day at 100s., while declines of 1s. to 2s. were recorded by Barclay Perkins, Bass Ratcliff, Vancouvers, Guinness, Ind Coope, Threlfalls and Watney Deferred.

The leading Tobaccos also had a heavy appearance, "Imps" lost no less than ⅛ to 7½, while Gallahers gave way ⅛ to 5½, "Bats" ⅛ to 5 and Carreras "A" 1 to 81.

COURTAULDS SLIP BACK.

The Stores group were affected by a certain amount of forced liquidation. Marks and Spencer lost ⅛ at 2¾ and Woolworths 2s. 9d. at 66s.

Provision and Catering issues had a less depressed appearance, but there were still a number of small declines.

Textiles generally continued to sag. In the Rayon section Courtaulds were subject to selling pressure and closed with a loss of 2s. at 43s. 6d., while American Celanese were marked down ⅞. The British Celanese issues also recorded a few pence.

IMPERIAL CHEMICALS WEAK.

Shipping shares failed to escape the general malaise. The two realisation issues were noticeably affected, the E.D. losing 3s. at 37s. and the R.M. 4s. at 35s. E.D. Holdings and Coast Lines gave way 1s. 6d. each to 24s. and 22s. 3d., respectively.

A generally weak tone prevailed in the Miscellaneous section, and substantial losses occurred in most of the popular counters. British Oxygen fell ⅛ to 3¼, Turner and Newalls ⅛ to 3½, and Imperial Chemicals showed the largest movement for many years, falling 2s. 4½ to 32s. 9d.

Griffith Hughes sagged to 17s. 6d., as did Beechams Deferred to 57s. 6d.. Boots Drug to 42s. 9d. and Saugers to 22s.; United Molasses were 1s. 6d. lower at 22s. 9d.

Among the Building issues Associated Cements were under pressure and the price fell 5s. to 81s. 3d.

OILS DEPRESSED BY FORCED SALES

Weakness in Oil shares became more pronounced yesterday, and in several cases prices fell to new lows for the current year. A dull start was attributed to the fall in American Oil stocks in the closing days of last week, prices of international counters being marked down appreciably at the beginning of business. Leading issues generally closed at the worst of the day, and in some cases quotations at the end were the lowest touched during the current year. Shells, for instance, with a loss of ⅛ at 4¼, compared with the year's previous lowest of 4¼. Forced realisations reported to be from the North were responsible for a decline of ⅛ to 5½ in Burmahs. The "Eagle" issues failed to hold the gains which resulted from the news of the granting of further concessions on the Poza Rica Field; Mexican Eagles fell 1s. 1½d. to 11s., and Canadian Eagles declined 1s. 3d. to 10s. 9d. In sympathy with the general tendency Trinidad issues became weak under the lead of Leaseholds, which fell ¼ to 4⅞, which is the lowest price touched this year.

RUBBERS DEPRESSED

Owing to the unfavourable tendency of raw Rubber prices and the unsatisfactory state of markets generally, nervous liquidation on a modest scale was sufficient to cause renewed dulness in the Rubber share market yesterday. In the absence of support, dealers were not prepared to take more stock on their books, and, consequently, quotations for the leading issues were reactionary from the outset. Lower levels did not prevent further selling, however, and, therefore, the late dealings witnessed some sharp declines. Anglo Dutch, Kuala Lumpur, Malacca and United Sua Betong were among the weaker features. Trading in the commodity section was very quiet, and spot rubber sold down to 6¾d. per pound. United Kingdom rubber stocks increased by 1,347 tons last week.

LONDON "STREET" MARKET

Business in the "street" market last evening was on a small scale. In Shorters Court sharp declines were seen in leading Internationals following adverse Wall street advice. Towards the close, however, a steadier tone developed and final prices were only fractionally lower than the House close. U.S. Steels fell at first to 49¾, but recovered, and at 50¾ were unchanged from their day's o'clock level. Nickels, however, finished at their lowest for the day at 38¾. Brazilian Tractions at 11¾ and Anacondas at 5¼ each showed final losses of ¼. Radios at 6¾ were easier, but New York Centrals at 16¾ more than regained their early fall. In the Oil section prices gave way further. Royal Dutch at 35¾ were ¼ lower, while Shells at 4¼, Anglo-Iranians at 3¾ and Burmahs at 5¼ were all easier. The Eagle issues lost a few pence each, Mexicans closing at 11s. and Canadians at 10s. 9d.

IRISHMAN'S DIARY

Dublin on Sunday : Colonel Charles Symons : Records of the Hunt : Poison at Dublin Castle : The Cardinal and the Press

A Film Problem

Those who saw the private presentation of Stahl's film, "Parnell," at the Capitol Theatre last week were greatly surprised to discover that it had apparently failed to satisfy the exacting moral standards of the Film Censor. Instead of the familiar signature, "J. Montgomery," or the almost equally famous initials, "J. H.," were the letters which indicated that the film had been passed by the Appeal Board.

From this it was plain that Mr. Montgomery had declined to sanction the public presentation of the film in the Free State, and had referred the matter to the collective wisdom of the Appeal Board. It would be interesting to discover why the Film Censor took this step with this particular film. Was it because Parnell had permitted a charge of adultery to go undefended in the English Divorce Court? Was it because he afterwards married a divorced woman? Was it on account of the few passionate scenes and some kisses?

I should have thought that everyone in Ireland, old and young, was thoroughly familiar with the story of Charles Stewart Parnell and Mrs. O'Shea, and that it would be unnecessary to gloss that story nowadays. On this point the Film Censor, apparently, thinks differently. I am left wondering why.

Colonel Charles Symons

The British Home Office advisor on fire prevention, Colonel Charles B. Symons, who is in Dublin at the moment, had a distinguished Army career with the Royal Engineers before he retired some years ago. He joined the Army in 1894, at the age of twenty, and before he was out of his twenties he was a Professor in the Royal Military College, Canada, where he remained until he was promoted to the rank of captain.

Then two years of survey work on the Gold Coast followed. During the Great War Colonel Symons was wounded, mentioned in despatches, and awarded the D.S.O. and, in 1919, the C.M.G. Later he spent two or three years in Iraq as Chief Engineer under the Air Ministry.

A Deadly Find

Yesterday I found myself at the Garda Siochana's Lost Property Office in Dublin, inspecting a strange and wonderful assortment of objects. But the strangest of all was an object which, to all outward appearance, was an ordinary cigarette-case, but, being opened, revealed a beautifully arranged little nest of phials. As the labels showed, most of these tiny phials contained powerful poisons.

Obviously the case had been lost by a doctor. But what manner of man was he that he apparently made no effort to recover so dangerous an object? Every now and then the British Broadcasting Corporation sends out S.O.S.s for the recovery of lost cases of poison—from which one may gather that English doctors rightly fear the risk of their falling into the hands of children or stupid people. I might commend the example to at least one Irish doctor.

Articles found and brought to the Police Lost Property Office are kept there for a year and a day, after which time they are sold. I am assured, however, that the deadly little cigarette-case will not be among the lots at the next auction.

Cardinal and the Press

Many others besides his immediate flock will join in congratulating the new Cardinal of Westminster. Pressmen, in particular, owe him a warm wish for future happiness and success, since His Eminence has already shown that he appreciates their difficulties, and has announced that he is willing to assist them.

At the meeting of the Guild of St. Francis of Sales last Friday evening, His Grace, as he was then, said that he had established an inquiry bureau at the archbishop's house. "I want you all to know," he said, "that so long as I am here you are welcome to all we can communicate to you, either by way of information or instruction." All who have experienced trouble in obtaining information from official sources, clerical or lay, will appreciate this gesture.

It may be that His Grace was thinking of writers as a class, but reporters will surely benefit the most. While on the subject of the Guild of St. Francis of Sales, I wonder why that particular saint should be regarded as the patron saint of newspaper men. I recently put the question to an eminent cleric, who suggested that the "Sales" was the crux of the matter. "Sales," he said, "is all you newspaper folk live for."

Sunday Scene

Passing through O'Connell street in the middle of the day on Sunday, and seeing the crowds lining the footwalks and hanging round the corners, I could not help reflecting on the queer ways Dubliners have of passing the day, and how agape they are with curiosity.

There was, for instance, a prying crowd gathered round a blue and grey omnibus drawn up by the kerb. The bus proclaimed in large lettering that it was the property of "The Great Levante, Australian Illusionist," and ended aptly enough, "How's Tricks." What a change it was to find Levante, one who had roughed it with Scouah and stock-dramatic companies in Australia and elsewhere, now travelling in such state.

What, too, did the party that occupied his beautifully upholstered 'bus think of the procession which passed along the street on its way to Glasnevin to honour one of the men who had lost their lives in Easter Week, 1916? For the crowd passing the time in O'Connell street the procession was, of course, an added something to catch their passing interest.

Then, as the procession, with its bands, moved off towards Parnell square, there was a change of interest, and several hundreds moved over to the corner of Cathal Brugha street, where a meeting started. I thought the remark of a young lady on the top of a tram apt and revealing when she said to her companion: "Speeches—do they never get tired of it?"

"Hunting by Ear"

I was aware that a recent book on birdsongs was accompanied by an illustrative set of gramophone records, but I was not prepared for the latest development of same idea when a bulky parcel arrived at this office during the week-end.

Opened, it proved to contain a box which, opened in its turn, displayed a book with the title of "Hunting by Ear." In a compartment under the book were two records of the sounds of fox-hunting. Everything is there: the sound of the horn, the crying of the hounds, the call of the huntsman. It is all very exhilarating.

Nowadays one learns languages by gramophone, and does one's daily dozen to the accompaniment of the gramophone. Whether one is expected to learn to sit a horse and to take a stone wall with the aid of these records I do not know; but certainly they are very pleasant to listen to.

The book, I might mention, is by Michael Berry and D. W. E. Brock, and the publishers are H. F. and G. Witherby, of London. With the records, box and all, it costs a guinea.

INTERNATIONAL DAY

STEPS TO WORLD PEACE

INTERESTING ADDRESSES AT ROTARY CLUB

WORLD peace was discussed by members of the Diplomatic Corps to the Free State at yesterday's International Day luncheon of the Dublin Rotary Club.

Closer co-operation between the club and the Irish Tourist Association was urged by Mr. Oswald Jamison, Chairman, International Services Committee of the club, who welcomed the guests. It was, he said, a source of gratification to them that in a world wrecked by fear and misunderstanding they in this country were divorced from most of the troubles. But their isolation did not make them indifferent to the parlous condition of the world. It did, however, make them hope that the peace which they enjoyed might be vouchsafed to others, and that peace, friendship and goodwill might become universal, and the heritage of all.

There was, he continued, an aspect of international Rotary which was rarely commented on, and that was the national benefit which this country derived as a result of its international activities. Their constant communications and contacts with the citizens of outside States reacted to the advantage of tourist traffic. "Therefore," said Mr. Jamison, "I suggest a closer link with our local Tourist Development Association. We can co-operate in this respect without straining in any way our Rotary ideals. We are working together at the moment. Personally, I never write to a Rotarian outside this country without enclosing a tourist map of Ireland, and I always think I am doing him a real service in letting him know of the beauty and charm of this wonderful country of ours."

At the outset Mr. Jamison said that the club had received messages from all parts of the world wishing them a successful international meeting.

His Excellency the Papal Nuncio, the Most Rev. Dr. Pascal Robinson, had written thanking the club for the honour of an invitation, and regretting that he had a previous engagement in Drogheda.

FRANCE AND IRELAND

Welcoming M. Guerlet, French Minister, Mr. Jamison said that the President of the Paris Rotary Club had sent felicitations. Ireland's association with France went back for many centuries. The bond of friendship had never been broken, but became stronger and more permanent each year.

Welcoming Mr. Cudahy, United States Minister, Mr. Jamison said that in days, which had not been so happy, America had received with open arms countless numbers of young Irish people, and equipped them with the opportunity of building up that great structure in the West, which, he believed, was destined to stabilise peace in the world and bring a new measure of hope to civilisation.

Concluding, he mentioned that there were now approximately 500,000 members of Rotary, all working unitedly for the development of peace, friendship and goodwill throughout the world.

The French Minister (M. Guerlet) said that if there was one club with which it was natural that foreign representatives should keep in touch it was the Rotary Club—the most international of all clubs. Diplomats, whose mission it was to consolidate and maintain relations between countries, knew the benefit that Rotary rendered to humanity.

The United States Minister (Mr. Cudahy) said that all through the world that day people were assembled and talking about peace.

"I suppose," he added, "there are no two countries that are so desirous of peace as the United States of America and the Irish Free State." It was all right to talk about peace, but how were they to implement their words; to translate into action their fair intentions? If he had his way he would have a meeting of representatives of every country of the world, at which the flags of every country would be entwined one beside the other.

U.S. WORK FOR PEACE

Later Mr. Cudahy said that some of them could speak intimately on the subject of war, and he had never seen a soldier yet who was not the greatest peace advocate in the world.

There was little enough that one person could do to assist the cause of peace, and very little that any one group or organisation could do. But if the combined will of the world and the combined efforts of organisations would support this will for peace nothing could prevail against it. Rotary, that great international movement, could render great help in the cause. He came from a country which had initiated Rotary—from a country which was the greatest example in the world to-day of internationalism, because to its shores had come people from all the countries of the world, including six million Irish people, whose numbers had increased to thirty millions.

Concluding, Mr. Cudahy spoke of the hospitality of the Irish, and the pleasure it gave him to stay in this country.

Dr. Beuziger, Consul-General for Switzerland, said that every town in his country had a Rotary club.

The Lord Mayor of Dublin (Alderman Alfred Byrne, T.D.) hoped that Rotary would assist the cause of peace.

M. Justice, Vice-Consul for Belgium, representing M. Goor, Consul-General, mentioned that King Albert had been one of the first members of Rotary in his country. Rotary, he thought, was one of the best agents for peace, which his country greatly desired.

Dr. Koetsl, Consul for Czecho-Slovakia; Mr. Braddock, O.B.E., Trade Commissioner for the United Kingdom, and Dr. Bleier, Chile Consul, also spoke. Mr. Balch, U.S. Consul-General and Mr. T. Wilson, of the American Legation, were also present.

Mr. T. A. Crehan, President, Dublin Rotary Club, presided.

The death occurred in an Edinburgh nursing home on Sunday, after a short illness, of Professor O. Charnock Bradley, D.Sc., principal of the Royal (Dick) Veterinary College, Edinburgh.

MISGUIDED BIOGRAPHY

Clark Gable Badly Directed

A Burlesque Parnell : "A Woman of Flame" : Another Edgar Wallace Film

By A. E. M.

Fewness of words is best; he was too great
For ours or any phrase.
Love could not guess, nor the slipped hound of hate
Track the soul's secret ways.

THOSE words were written by the late T. M. Kettle to mark the unveiling of the monument to Charles Stewart Parnell, just twenty-six years ago. They remain true to-day, although scores of books have been written about Parnell and a few plays. They remain doubly true after Mr. Clark Gable has been seen with the great name of Parnell used as a label. What "the slipped hound of hate," nor even "love could not guess," escaped the American playwright, from whose work the English playwright, John Van Druten, made a film scenario, and the excellent director, John M. Stahl, made his film. Parnell was almost as many-faceted as truth itself: he was the Wicklow squire, who served in the Militia and played cricket; the landlord who came to support the Land League; the Protestant "loyalist," who became the leader of a Nationalist Party; the icy bachelor, whose love story shattered a nation's hopes. Any one of these facets of the great man might have made a film, or a series of films, but always the character of the man must be held rigidly in view. That has not been done by John M. Stahl in his "Parnell," which may be seen at the Capitol Theatre this week. The original playwright made the mistake of subordinating everything to the romantic love story, and when once that had been done the descent into pathos was easy.

Pathetic Lover

If Parnell had been made into a pathetic lover the film might still be acceptable under its present title. As the incidents are presented, and as the character of the man is interpreted by Mr. Clark Gable, it is difficult to feel sympathy for one who staked everything upon his love for an unhappily married woman, and who, by so doing, smashed himself and destroyed the work of a generation. The director of the film admits frankly enough that in directing the film he "simply uses the feminine approach," and by this approach he has distorted not only the facts of history and biography, but he has also given undue emphasis to what was a single facet of Parnell's character. The effect of this false approach is to deprive the film of a hero, and to give instead a couple of heroines. The central figure in the film is not Parnell—it is Mrs. O'Shea; and she is most ably and suitably seconded by "Aunt Ben." The whole business is a story such as might have been contrived easily in the days when penny novelettes were fashionable; a story for nursemaids sauntering in the park, or for love-starved old maids in the American Middle West. What an audience in Boyd's "Middletown" would make of the real Parnell only the readers of Boyd's books will comprehend; and to make a great man easily understood by "Middleton" Parnell has been thrown to the geese.

Gable as Gable

Neither Clark Gable nor Myrna Loy have been too happily cast: from the beginning they are obviously ill at ease and more than a little bewildered. When Clark Gable refused to wear the beard of Parnell his inner shrewdness directed him correctly; with or without a beard he could never have been the Parnell that Ireland and England knew. He wisely decided to be himself, but it was a shabby thing to give him the label of a great name. It is like offering lemon syrup under the label of an old liqueur whiskey, and the effect is just as nauseating as that would be to a connoisseur. Clark Gable has been successful in many undertakings in his time, from cornet player in a travelling show to the darling of feminine audiences, but he never could be, or look like, Charles Stewart Parnell. It was courageous of him to accept the portrayal of such a man; what is not to be forgiven is the recklessness of a director who cast him for the part. The film loses power through its over-emphasis on the romantic aspects of the story, and Clark Gable fails utterly to suggest Parnell's stature as a political leader. There is a complete failure to convince an audience of Parnell's political idealism and of the conflict between that idealism and his love for Katherine O'Shea. Because of this failure the climax is robbed of its density.

The Little Things

There need be no quarrel about the transposition of scenes and the distortion of established facts in order that they may be fitted into a selected scheme. That Pigott shoots himself outside the doors of the London Law Courts, or that the damning letter is found by Mrs. O'Shea, although serious blemishes if fitted into a piece of biographical writing, are not nearly so heinous offences in something which is frankly entertainment. The dramatist is given the licence to transpose events to heighten the effects of any scene, so there need be no serious disturbance about the use playwright and scenarist have made of established facts in the life of Parnell. What is really serious, and what will make the film offensive in the eyes of fervent Parnellites, is that the character of the man is distorted. If the same story were presented with fictitious names the film would be regarded as excellent entertainment, and the performances of Clark Gable and Myrna Loy rather better than usual. To present a novelettish "Boy Meets Girl" story with two of the screen's matinée idols in leading parts, and label that story "Parnell," is to take undue liberties with a great name. Clark Gable is true to his own talent when he strides from the presidential chair in Committee Room 15 and fells an offending member of the Irish Party with a punch in the jaw: he is untrue to Parnell. That is all that need be said.

Good Performances

"Parnell" is quite good entertainment if the labels be forgotten. The scenes are both dramatic and entertaining, and there is a considerable amount of humour contributed by that splendid actress, Edna May Oliver, whose "Aunt Ben" very nearly steals the picture. When the failure of the two principals is overlooked there are many fine pieces of acting in the film. Quite the best performance in the film is that of Alan Marshall as the suave and vindictive Captain O'Shea. This is one of the best performances given by a screen actor for a long time, and it marks Alan Marshall as an actor to be watched in future. Other fine performances are given by Neil Fitzgerald as Pigott, Brandon Tynan as Redmond, Donald Crisp as Michael Davitt, and George Zucco as Sir Charles Russell.

At the Metropole Cinema Robert Taylor and Barbara Stanwyck have proven so popular in "His Affair" that the film has been retained for a second week. This is a thrilling story of a young officer who had been entrusted with a secret mission by President McKinley, and whose life is endangered by the assassination of the President.

"The Road Back," in which Erich Remarque tells the story of Germany in the first few years after the war, is in its eighth week at the Astor Cinema. It is a film that will be remembered when others are forgotten.

Dietrich

In "Knight Without Armour," at the Savoy Cinema, Marlene Dietrich appears as a Russian Countess, who is made a prisoner of the revolutionaries in 1917, and who is rescued by an English translator in the secret service. The story is by James Hilton, the author of "Lost Horizon," and it gives a good impression of conditions in Russia when the empire collapsed and Lenin and Trotsky assumed control. The film is good entertainment, but more interesting than the film is the description given to Marlene Dietrich and Robert Donat—"a woman of flame and a man of steel." Dietrich as "a woman of flame" is delicious; as well describe an iceberg as volcanic. If Donat had been described as "a man of flame," and Dietrich as "a woman of steel," their rôles in the film would be understood.

At the Stephen's Green Cinema there is a double-feature programme, in which "The 13th Chair" takes the premier place. The film is packed with excitement, and for all who like a murder mystery satisfactorily solved it will be exactly what they need. A very fine cast is headed by Dame May Whitty and Madge Evans. "Born to Fight" is a boxing story, with plenty of hard hitting and fast movement.

In "Lloyds of London" the Grand Central Cinema offers the romantic tale of the famous insurance organisation. The cast includes Tyrone Power, Madeleine Carroll, Freddie Bartholomew and Sir Guy Standing.

Marlene Dietrich in "Knight Without Armour."

Clark Gable, in the name-part of the film "Parnell," with Edna May Oliver and Myrna Loy.

Another Edgar Wallace

It used to be said "you cannot fail to be thrilled by Edgar Wallace," and those who visit the Grafton Picture House to see the film version of "The Frog" will not be disappointed. Who is The Frog? In the competition to answer this question correctly every member of the audience will be involved. The film is really gripping entertainment, with thrilling episodes and humorous interlude.

"Pride of the Marines," which is the leading film at the Corinthian Cinema this week, contrives to give a magnificent conspectus of the military and naval power of the United States in the form of an entertaining story. The film was made entirely at the United States Marines' Dépôt at San Diego, so that the background to the story is authentic. Charles Bickford heads the cast as a sentimental soldier who adopts an orphan and brings the boy to the Base to live. In "Motor Madness" are all the thrills of motor-boat racing, with the old Abbey Theatre actor J. M. Kerrigan in the cast.

The Theatre Royal film this week is entitled "Bengal Tiger." It is a stirring drama of life in a circus, with Barton MacLane, June Travis and Warren William heading the cast.

For the first part of the week the Theatre De Luxe will present Bing Crosby in "Waikiki Wedding" and "Ghost Town Go'd." From Thursday to Saturday the films will be "Charlie Chan at the Olympics," with Warner Oland in his familiar guise as Chan, and Gene Autry in "Ride, Ranger, Ride."

WHAT happened when Peter Standish, an American, with a passion for the eighteenth century, walked out of the present-day setting of a Queen Anne house in the heart of London and back two centuries into his favourite period, has already been made familiar to a large public by stage and screen presentations of that strangely fascinating play, "Berkeley Square." Yet the story has such a strangely haunting beauty that surely even those familiar with it will not resist the temptation to listen to the radio adaption of this skilful co-mingling of the past and present when it is broadcast from London Regional at 9 o'clock. There are few love stories more fantastic and at the same time more strangely moving than that of the fatal attraction of the two central figures of this play—Standish and the Lady Anne Pettigrew, separated in the flesh by two hundred years, and yet one in spirit—and these two leading rôles will be played to-night by Leslie Howard and Gladys Young. Howard, of course, played this part in the screen version of the play, and proved by his performence that he was one of the few stars in the film firmament that could really act as well as present a pleasing exterior. He is no newcomer to radio drama, having played several parts "on the air" in the United States. One may mention in passing that "Berkeley Square" is founded on a novel by Henry James, and that this will be the second time this week that a radio play based on a work of this author has been presented from a British station. M. H. Allen's adaption of the short story, "Daisy Miller"—a simple story, with a cosmopolitan setting at Vevey and Rome—was extremely effective, and, despite its unhappy ending, cannot have failed to please all those who heard it in last Sunday night's National programme.

The second of a series of musical programmes which are being broadcast from British stations by the Kutcher String Quartet this week, under the title "The Belaiev Circle," will be given in the National programme at 6.25 this evening. This "Circle" took its name from a wealthy music lover at whose house Rimsky-Korsakov and a group of his young pupils used to meet during the eighties. An amateur viola player himself, Belaiev was very fond of chamber music, and the circle used to gather at his house every Friday to hear and play quartets. After a while he began to print at his own expense the compositions of his young friends, among whom were numbered, besides Rimsky-Karsakov, such now famous composers as Borodin and Glazunov, and this small beginning lead him eventually to found one of the biggest music publishing firms in post-war Russia.

Those who cherish the memory of those hilarious experiences of an Irish R.M., as related by Somerville and Ross, will surely listen with renewed zest to Denis Johnston when he reads, in the Northern Ireland programme to-night, the almost epical tale of "Philippa's Fox Hunt." Those who do will hear once again how that formidable character, Mrs. Knox of Aussolas, interrupted family prayers to go fox-hunting, and of the part played in the chase by Philippa, who, under the combined influence of a sunset and a string band, had quit the English shires and cast herself in the new and unfamiliar rôle of the young wife of a resident magistrate in the West of Ireland.

There does not seem to be much of outstanding interest in to-night's Continental programmes, although the Frankfurt station orchestra's gala presentation of a programme made up of the works of Künneke, under the baton of the composer himself, should be worth listening to for a short time at least. Admirers of Schiller can "tune-in" at 7.15 to another German station, and be taken to the scenes of the poet's youth and early manhood. Schiller's works of that period have as an underlying motive a strong philosophy of freedom, notably the first of his plays to be produced, "Die Rauber," which was written while he was a student at a military academy, and which very fully expresses his discontent with discipline and urge for mental freedom.

When A Doctor Gets Indigestion

By Dr. F. B. Scott, M.D., Paris.

Did you realise that doctors are more liable to indigestion and stomach trouble than anyone else? Of course, when you come to think of it, the reason is obvious: the doctor, being at the beck and call of hundreds of patients, finds it impossible to get regular meals.

As common with most doctors, I find that the best way to prevent or to relieve digestive trouble is to take a good antacid after meals. My personal preference is 'Bisurated' Magnesia. If ever I get stomach pain or flatulence, a dose of 'Bisurated' Magnesia will always put me right, because it instantly neutralises the excess acid which is usually the cause of the trouble. In all cases of indigestion, wind, or pain after meals, I strongly recommend 'Bisurated' Magnesia.

Note: 'Bisurated' Magnesia, referred to above by Dr. Scott, is available at all chemists at prices from 6d. to 2/6.

THE BEGINNING OF IRISH LITERATURE

LECTURE BY DR. ROBIN FLOWER

FROM OUR CORRESPONDENT.

LONDON, Sunday.

Dr. Robin Flower, Curator of Irish Manuscripts at the British Museum, gave a lecture yesterday evening at the Inns of Court Mission Hall, Drury lane, arranged by the Gaelic League of London, and he took as his subject: "The Beginning of Irish Literature."

He pointed out that the actual writing down of ancient sagas did not take place till the sixth and seventh centuries. Up to that time the sagas had been traditionally handed down through the bards orally. The monastaries, particularly of Bangor and of Clonard, were the homes of early literature, which was carried on by poets, historians, and clerics.

The lecturer dealt with the influx of English students into Ireland from the middle of the seventh century, and the number of Englishmen of noble birth who visited the Irish schools of learning. Many of the saints and scholars of the sixth and seventh centuries were educated at the monasteries of Bangor and Clonard.

A lucky bite by a small native boy has won a diamond valued at £2,000 for a prospector. The boy was scratching about the claim when he found a stone. He tried to bite it, but found that it was too big to go into his mouth. It turned out to be a diamond weighing 113¾ carats. It is of perfect shape, but the colour is stated to be defective.

STORM OVER WICKLOW

It happened one night when it was found that there was no Jelly in the house. Fortunately there was a telephone and an enterprising grocer at the other end. Nation's Jelly Crystals was what he recommended. Quick and easy to make, he said, and much nicer than any other jelly. A few 2d. packets saved an awkward situation, and now there's no longer a storm over Wicklow.—(Advt.)

DR. OLIVER GOGARTY SUED FOR LIBEL

QUOTATIONS FROM BOOK ABOUT DUBLIN

"VENOMOUS LIBELS," SAYS COUNSEL

DUBLIN DIVORCE CASE RECALLED

(BEFORE MR. JUSTICE O'BYRNE AND A JURY.)

THE hearing of the libel action of Henry Morris Sinclair, antique dealer and jeweller, Grafton street, Dublin, against Dr. Oliver St. John Gogarty, 15 Ely place, Dublin, arising out of passages in Dr. Gogarty's book, "As I was going down Sackville Street," was begun.

Messrs. Rich and Cowan, Ltd., the London publishers of the book, also had been sued, but it was announced that the action against them had been discontinued.

The Court was crowded.

Miss Dorothy McArdle, the author of the "Irish Republic," the only woman called on the jury, was "challenged" by the solicitor to the plaintiff. She was the only juror challenged on behalf of either the plaintiff or defendant.

The action is brought for damages for alleged libel stated to appear in the book, and an injunction to restrain publication of the book containing the alleged libel.

The statement of claim set out that the plaintiff had suffered damage from the defendant falsely writing and publishing of and concerning the plaintiff in the book the following words:—

"And one thing more—where can we buy antiques?"

"Nassau street, Sackville street, Liffey street, where Naylor's is, and all along the quays. Have you not heard?

'Two Jews grew in Sackville street
And not in Piccadilly,
One was gaitered on the feet,
The other one was Willie.

'And if you took your pick of them,
Whichever one you choose,
You'd like the other one more than him,
So wistful were these Jews.

'They kept a shop for objects wrought
By Masters famed of old,
Where you, no matter what you bought
Were genuinely so'd.

'But Willie spent the sesterces
And brought on strange disasters
Because he sought new mistresses
More keenly than old Masters.

'The other . . .'"

'Two Jews grew in Sackville street
And not in Piccadilly,
One was gaitered on the feet,
The other one was Willie.

'And if you took the pick of them
Whichever one you choose,
You'd like the other one more than him,
So wistful were these Jews.'

"NEVER AT AN ORGY"

"This what?" asked Mrs. Shillington.

"Orgy," I repeated. "When there is any pleasant and private feast from which a few, who think they should have been invited, are excluded they invariably call it an orgy. I have always regretted that I was never at an orgy; I am trying to repair that shortcoming now. As I say, I will produce George . . ."

"Well, until you do, just recite his latest."

"Very well," said I. "You must know that George is not only the arbiter elegantiae of Dublin, but a critic of the grosser forms of licence. Now, there was an old usurer who had eyes like a pair of periwinkles on which somebody had been experimenting with a pin, and a nose like a shrunken tomato, one side of which swung independently of the other. The older he grew the more he pursued the immature, and enticed little girls into his office. That was bad enough, but he had grandsons, and these directed the steps of their youth to follow in grandfather's footsteps, with more zeal than discrimination. I explained the position to George, who, after due fermentation, produced the following pronunciamento:—

'It is a thing to wonder at, but hardly to admire,
How they who do desire the most guard most against desire;
They choose their friends or mistress so that None may yearn to touch her:
Thus did the twin grandchildren of the ancient Chicke, Butcher. . .

"I like the roll and oracular sound of 'Thus did,' etc., and the play on the meanings of wonder and admire—nil admirari!—and the organ note in that 'twin grandchildren,' which endows their infamy with grandeur until it almost equals the fame of the Great Twin Brethren, Castor and beneficent Pollux. Verse calls them forth from vulgar obloquy.'

"Another laurel or burden for 'George' to bear," said Mrs. Shillington. "Who are the great Twin Brethren?"

"Consummations of the poet's dream. Shadows invoked by sound. Men who do not exist. I thought I made that clear."

THE DEFENCE

By his defence, Dr. Gogarty pleaded that, if he did write or publish the words complained of (which was denied), the words or passages complained of did not refer to the plaintiff or to any person, living or dead; that the passages complained of were of an entirely fictitious character, and would be so read and understood by any reasonable person. The defendant said that the words complained of did not constitute a libel on the plaintiff, and denied that the plaintiff was injured in his credit or reputation or suffered any damage.

Mr. Albert E. Wood, K.C.; Mr. J. A. McCarthy, K.C., and Mr. Ernest M. Wood (instructed by Messrs. Reddin and Reddin) appeared for the plaintiff; and Mr. J. M. FitzGerald, K.C.; Mr. Brereton Barry, K.C., and Mr. Oliver Gogarty (instructed by Messrs. A. Cox and Co.) for Dr. Gogarty.

Opening the case for the plaintiff, Mr. Wood, K.C., said that one of the passages complained of appeared in the American edition of the book, which was described on the title page as being "a fantasy and fact," while the English edition simply contained the title of the book. Both of these editions had circulated widely in Dublin, and the libels complained of had received widespread publicity. No more serious or more grave libels had ever come before a Dublin jury?

Having read the verses which the plaintiff alleged were a libel on him, Mr. Wood said that for some reason best known to the defendant, only the first two verses were published in the English edition.

TWO BROTHERS

Mr. Wood said that there were two brothers Sinclair. Henry, the plaintiff, and William, who was dead, were adopted by old Morris Harris, who, they alleged, was "the old usurer" referred to in the publication. The charge against him was that "he pursued the immature," and that he had induced little girls into his office. He had been associated with the life of Dublin for many years, he had been an Alderman of the city, and in view of the infamous nature of the charge against the grandfather and the defence, that had been placed on the files of the court, plaintiff had been forced, in defence of his own name, to see that Dr. Gogarty, who had sought to perpetuate a matter that should never have been mentioned by a decent citizen, should not be allowed to overwhelm the plaintiff and his family with obloquy and everlasting disgrace.

The book, continued Mr. Wood, purported to give portraits of Dublin citizens, and Mr. Francis Hackett in his introduction to the American book said: "Dr. Gogarty steeps his pen in bitterness," but counsel suggested that Dr. Gogarty had vilified the living and the dead in a pen dipped in the scourings of a putrid and amoral mind.

With no mercy and with no pity he had pursued the memory of the plaintiff's grandfather as a ghoul, and had applied no mercy and no pity to William Sinclair, his one time friend, and to the plaintiff, whom he had pursued with a savagery and ghoulishness which could only fit in with the abberations of an amoral mind in a pot-boiling scurrility run for the private gain of the author.

Mr. Wood said that the defendant had been deliberate and cunning in his identifying the plaintiff and his late brother with their grandfather, and the unsavoury incidents alleged against him during his lifetime.

"NOTORIOUS CASE"

Outlining the historical background, Mr. Wood said that in 1891 Harris, the grandfather, married a woman much younger than himself, and, unfortunately, it was a most chequered married life, which received great notoriety, for shortly after the marriage down to 1906 there were divorce proceedings. It was a very notorious case, the wife charging the late Morris Harris with having enticed little girls into the office for the purpose of immolating them. There were other grounds, too, among them an allegation of cruelty. Mr. Harris was acquitted on the charge relating to the alleged enticement of little girls; but whether it was true or false, that belonged to the dead past. The fact was that there was an allegation, and that it was part of the city life in the past, and he wondered if the jury could believe Dr. St. John Gogarty when he came there and told them about fictional art, and that he did not refer to any person, living or dead. Whether Dr. Gogarty would say that or not, one thing was perfectly certain—the friends of Mr. Sinclair, who were in any degree contemporaries, when they read that passage know whom it referred to, and those who were not contempories became curious; and between the two sets of words which had been used in regard to Mr. Sinclair would he not be right in saying that no more serious or grave libel had ever been made in civil proceedings to be tried by a jury. They could not in any way help the widow and children of William Abraham (brother of the plaintiff). Why did not Dr. Gogarty mention his name?

Why, when he was writing his English edition, did Dr. Gogarty omit two of the four verses containing the references to strange mistresses—verses that were so grossly and infamously libellous? They had appeared in the American edition. Dr. Gogarty had omitted the names; but he had made it clear beyond demonstration to whom it pointed. The two sons who had been adopted—one in 1902 as a partner, while the other worked the business after the old man's death—carried on together until 1918, when William became an invalid, and in 1935 Mr. Henry Sinclair disposed of the business in Nassau street.

Therefore, in regard to "the old usurer," in regard to "the Jews," in regard to "Nassau street," in regard to "the art dealing business," they had carried on that business in Nassau street under the name of Morris Harris or Harris and Sinclair in the city for a period of from seventy to seventy-five years. The brothers knew Dr. Gogarty and were friendly with him.

"PROWESS AS POET"

It would be deposed that in the winter of 1933 Mr. Henry Sinclair was having a drink with Dr. Gogarty in the Shelbourne Hotel, and, vain of his prowess as a poet, Dr. Gogarty commenced reading some verses in which two Jews figured. Henry Sinclair then told him that if ever he published the verses he would bring a libel action against him. One of Dublin's most reputable citizens got the book; but after he had begun reading it he pitched it in the corner because of its contents.

"I suggest to you," said Mr. Wood, "that the defendant knew how nearly he was involving himself in a libel action, and he sought carefully to guard himself; but he knew also that he was giving a spicy paragraph to the citizens of this city and elsewhere, and he knew that in this city, by omitting the names of Harris and Sinclair, those who knew the period could put their fingers on them, because he had given sufficient data to revive old memories and sufficient data to whet curiosity, so as to enable the public to make no mistake as to the persons whom he designated as the 'Two Jews?'

"SPICY SMUT"

"I wonder," he said, "will any literary experts come forward to confuse the plain terms in this case? Will they have the audacity to contend that these vile and venomous libels have the ring of folklore, that they have a high technical character, that they are witty, that they have verbal dexterity, or that they are in keeping with the feeling of Elizabethan speech? They may, but when they have gone you will be left with this grave and serious libel unexplained. These libels, at most, appeal to the abnormal few who live to perpetuate spicy smut. Is there a hope that a Jew will not receive justice from a Dublin jury? Is it the gambler's throw? Throughout all our chequered history one of the great traditions of our city is that it has never persecuted the Jews, and I know, members of the jury, that you will preserve that tradition."

Continuing, Mr. Wood said that counsel for the defendant had opposed the application made in the High Court for an injunction to stop the sale of the book until after the hearing of the present action, but he had not availed of the opportunity given him then and on another occasion to deny on oath that the words complained of referred to the plaintiff. There was, at least, this to be said for the defendant: that he dare not perjure himself, and he had not. He had pleaded in his defence that the passages did not refer to the plaintiff, but that was not on oath.

"One thing I will ask you," concluded Mr. Wood, "Here we are on the threshold of the life of a young, and we believe, a free nation. We are, to the best of our ability, fighting for the maintenance and the creation of a sound and a sane civic life, literary, moral and spiritual, and one of the great, if not the greatest, dangers is that a literary, savage ghoul and knave can hold up our citizens to scorn and obloquy, and then tell us that he is 'endowing their infamy with grandeur.'"

The first witness called was Herbert E. Pembury, of Messrs. Greene, booksellers, Clare street, Dublin, who, replying to Mr Wood, said that his firm had sold fifty-five copies of the English and twelve of the American edition.

Walter Hanna, bookseller, Nassau street, Dublin, said that his firm had sold eighty-six copies of the English edition.

Mr. J. Dowling, of Messrs. Cambridge, booksellers, Grafton street, said that he ordered 136 copies of the English edition, all of which were sold.

Mr W. J. Humphries, bookseller, Trinity street, said that he ordered approximately 105 copies of the English edition and sold 71. He also sold three copies of the American edition, which were ordered by one person.

Mr. FitzGerald—Who was the person who ordered those three copies?

Witness—Mr. Sinclair.

Mr FitzGerald—How soon after the publication of the English edition did he order the copies of the American edition?—Two or three months afterwards. The English edition was published about the middle of April.

Mr. B. Eason, of Messrs. Eason and Sons, said his firm ordered 103 copies of the English edition and sold 82. None of the American edition was ordered.

PLAINTIFF'S EVIDENCE

The plaintiff, Mr. Henry Morris Sinclair, was then called. He said that the late Mr. Morris Harris was his grandfather, and had carried on business as a dealer in antiques at Nassau street since about 1860. He had been married twice, and there had been a number of children by the first marriage, one of whom was his (plaintiff) mother, Elizabeth. She married Mr. Sinclair, and they carried on business in Westland row. Plaintiff and his twin brother, Abraham, were adopted by the late Mr. Harris, and they were brought up in the Jewish faith. Proceeding, plaintiff said that his grandfather married secondly in 1891, and his wife was much younger than he. There were divorce proceedings in 1906, and the late Mr. Tim Healy was counsel for Mrs. Harris. Plaintiff was present in court during the hearing, and heard Mr. Healy, in his address to the jury, mention a matter now referred to in the libel.

Reading from a copy of a newspaper, dated Saturday, November 3, 1906, Mr. Wood said: "Proceeding to deal with another aspect of the case, counsel stated that on one occasion when the wife paid a visit to the shop, he sent her on some errand. She returned sooner than expected and found the inside glass door locked. After a moment or two she saw a little girl, not more than twelve years of age, emerge from the side door, and she said she saw coppers in her hand, which the girl said the old man had given her."

To plaintiff—Were you present in court, and did you hear the late Mr. Healy make that statement in his address to the jury?

Plaintiff—I was.

In the course of further evidence, he said that he knew Dr. Gogarty for a very long time, but was not one of his intimate friends. He met Dr. Gogarty in the smokeroom of the Shelbourne Hotel in 1933, and Dr. Gogarty quoted verses about two Jews who lived in Grafton street, and "One was gaitered on the feet; the other one was Willie."

"I said to him," said the plaintiff, "if you put that in your book I will take an action for libel against you."

In reply to Mr Wood, plaintiff said that he had been in partnership with his brother, William, whom Dr. Gogarty knew well. He (plaintiff) wore gaiters, and at one time wore them continually. As his grandfather grew old, his nose became bulbous.

Mr. Wood—When did you first open the book to read it?—In my office after I got back.

Tell my lord and the jury how it was that you came across the passages?—In reading down the book I came naturally to the verses.

Did you read on?—Yes, I read on and saw the second passage.

Witness added that he afterwards saw his solicitor.

CHURCH OF IRELAND

Cross-examined by Mr. FitzGerald, K.C., witness said that his father was of the Church of Ireland persuasion. He carried on business at Westland Row, and witness believed that he was of Scotch extraction.

Mr. FitzGerald—You and your brother were transferred to the care of your uncle to be brought up as Jews?—Yes, that was the result.

How old were you when you were handed over to the care of your uncle?—Three months.

I suggest to you that the name Sinclair would be the last name for a Jew to bear. The name is that of a family dedicated to St. Clair of Assisi. Is not that right?—Yes.

And a highly objectionable name for a Jew to carry?—Oh, not at all.

I suggest to you that any one knowing you as Sinclair would never know you were a Jew unless they were told you were. The name would never suggest your religion?—There are Jews whose names do not suggest their religion.

You know there are lots of Jews who are forced to take strange names because their names are unpronounceable?—Yes.

You never carried on business in Sackville street?—No.

But there are at the present time members of your adopted Church who do carry on business in Sackville street?—Probably there are.

I suggest there is no warrant for your suggesting that the two Jews who grew in Sackville street meant you and your brother, who were flourishing in Nassau street?—But it does mean that.

Do you know that these verses were not confined to the great City of Dublin, but have been the common lot of rhymesters—folklore if you like—in England as well as in Ireland?—I think the verses are definitely localised.

You never heard of the Jews who grew in Wardour street and in Jermyn street?—No, I never did.

I suggest this verse was borrowed from another town, and that the Sackville street referred to is the Sackville street in Piccadilly?—"As I was going down Sackville street" means Dublin.

PARTY IN HOTEL

In further reply to Mr. FitzGerald, witness said that up to this time he was on friendly terms with Dr. Gogarty. He had actually warned him about using this poem about four years before. He (witness), in the autumn of 1936, met Dr. Gogarty in the Dolphin Hotel. Witness was accompanied by a Miss Nora Hoult, and joined the party at which Dr. Gogarty and his son and Mr. Frederick Higgins, the well-known poet, were present.

Mr. FitzGerald—And you knew that Mr. Frederick Higgins has sworn that at that party Dr. Gogarty, amongst other stories, recited these lines about the two Jews in Sackville street? I never heard him.

And you did go to the party deliberately with Miss Hoult, who was a literary lady?—Nothing of the kind. I went there by accident. I did not know that they were there. I certainly did not go to meet Dr. Gogarty. I joined because Miss Hoult preceded me, and I could not do otherwise.

Who would recognise your grandfather as an old usurer?—There would be a great many people who would immediately recognise him.

Mr. FitzGerald put it to the plaintiff that the passage beginning on page 70 of the book had no reference to a Jew, and asked the witness where did he see anything to connect it with the passage commencing on page 65.

Witness—I say that, in association with what follows, it confirms the identity of the two people.

Mr. FitzGerald—I suggest that there is not the slightest thing to connect the alleged libel on page 65 and the one beginning on page 70, and that, on the contrary, the second alleged libel contains no reference to a Jew whatsoever—is not that right?—Yes, but anyone knowing the background of Dublin at that time would know who is meant.

I am asking you what reasonable man, who lived in the ordinary life of Dublin, could possibly connect you with that second alleged libel?—He probably would, because in the course of time someone who did not like me would tell him.

Further questioned, plaintiff said that he well remembered the facts in the case, already referred to, in which he was called as a witness.

Mr. FitzGerald—And I think, amongst other things, you were charged with having assisted your old grandfather in assaulting his wife in a very disgraceful manner?—There were many charges.

Counsel added that he was talking about the divorce case in which the witness gave evidence to exculpate himself from the charge of assault. He put it to witness that the charge against his grandfather was one of cruelty, and that part of the particulars was that witness assisted his grandfather, along with his brother, in assaulting his grandfather's wife.

Witness—Yes.

And he was convicted of that cruelty?—I don't know about that.

Don't you think that, if anybody wanted to vilify you, he might have brought in the reference to your part in the divorce action?—I don't think so at all.

You think he wanted to libel you without making the thing clear?—In safety, I would say: he wanted to make the attack without risk to himself.

CEASED BUSINESS

Further questioned, plaintiff said that he and his brother had ceased to carry on business in Nassau street since 1918, but they were well known as having traded together. His brother remained in Dublin until 1922, carrying on business in Frederick street.

Mr. FitzGerald—I suggest that there is no justification for the bringing of this action by you, and that it can have only one object—you want to make money out of it. Surely, you didn't want to rehabilitate your grandfather's memory by recalling all this horrible evidence to the minds of the public after twenty-eight years?—I realised that very fully, nor did I want to do it, but I had to do it. I have not brought the case for money. I originally wanted to take criminal proceedings.

Why didn't you?—My solicitor, Mr. Hayes, advised me to drop that.

You know that he is one of the soundest, ablest and oldest solicitors in Dublin?—I don't know his reason.

He said "Drop it," and you dropped him?—I didn't drop him.

Witness added that, on Mr. Hayes's advice, he went to Messrs. Reddin.

Further questioned, plaintiff said that his late brother wished to be associated with him in the action. He said that his grandfather was innocent of the things that had been alleged against him in the book.

Mr. FitzGerald—What of the charge of treating his wife with cruelty?—Cruelty is a legal term. I don't know what it means.

Plaintiff added that it was untrue to say that his grandfather beat his wife. He could not clear the matter without opening that. "It is like opening a charnel house," he said. "But I cannot help it."

"MORE KIND THAN KIN"

In reply to Mr. FitzGerald, he denied that Mr. Samuel Beckett, who had made an affidavit in the present action, was a relative of his. Mr Beckett's aunt married witness's twin brother.

Mr FitzGerald—I think he is a little more kind than kin. This gentleman, who calls himself an author, was the only person you could find to make an affidavit to identify yourself and your brother as the persons hit at in this so-called libel.

Plaintiff—The time was very short, and I wanted to stop this book.

Mr. John Murray optician, Duke street, said that he was close on seventy years of age, and he remembered the late Mr. Morris Harris, who carried on the business of an antique dealer. He also knew the plaintiff and his brother, who had been adopted by Mr. Harris. He read Dr. Gogarty's book early this year in Enniskerry, and when he came to the passages referring to the two Jews in Sackville street he came to the conclusion that they referred to the Sinclairs. The passage relating to "an old usurer" he took to refer to the late Morris Harris.

In reply to further questions, the witness said that he saw the American edition of the book later, and he came to the conclusion that the extra verses referred to the Sinclairs.

In cross-examination by Mr. FitzGerald, the witness said that although Mr. Harris was an antique dealer, one might think that he had been associated with money-lending, and in this way might be "an old usurer."

"IRISH TIMES" REVIEW

Brindsley Gerty said that he had been an antique dealer in business with his father in Dawson street. He knew the late Mr. Morris Harris and the Sinclairs. When he read the review of the book in the Irish Times he got a loan of a copy and read it. He immediately associated the reference to the "two Jews" with the Sinclairs of Nassau street.

Mr. Wood—When you read the lines, "One was gaitered on the feet, the other one was Willie," what struck you?

Witness—In business we often had a difficulty if the names of the Sinclairs turned up as to which one it was, and it would frequently be asked: "Is it the fellow that wears the gaiters or the fellow with the whiskers?" Willie had a beard.

Did you read the lines: "Now, there was an old usurer who had eyes like a pair of periwinkles on which somebody had been experimenting with a pin, and a nose like a shrunken tomato, one side of which swung independently of the other"?—Yes.

What did you think?—It was more or less a description of Morris Harris's appearance. He was not what you would call a prepossessing man by any means.

THE DIVORCE CASE

William Samuel Hayes, principal of the firm of William Hayes and Sons, solicitors, said that his firm had acted for the late Mr. Morris Harris in divorce proceedings, Harris v. Harris, 1906, and he produced the papers in connection with the proceedings. The petition in paragraph 12, said witness, contained the charge: "The petitioner charges that respondent on divers occasion since his marriage brought into his business premises in Nassau street young newspaper and poor female children for immoral purposes, and did commit adultery on the said premises with the said children, so that petitioner was obliged to remain during business hours about the said premises, and on many occasions was forcibly removed therefrom by the respondent and his two grandsons."

Witness produced an excerpt taken by himself of the evidence given by the petitioner, and Mr. FitzGerald remarked that he did not object to it.

Witness read his notes of the evidence: "I went to shop in Nassau street sometime before 1906, just before, and he sent me out to Dolphin's Barn and I forgot my purse; door locked; he let out the children . . . the gentleman is coming to open the door for you . . . she had coppers in her hand, and she said he had given them to her . . . I saw him letting out the child at the window."

Witness was about to produce a brief held by the late Mr. D. M. Wilson, counsel in the case, and Mr. FitzGerald objected.

The witness said he had not read the book, but had read extracts. He had been interviewed by Mr. Henry Sinclair in regard to some of the extracts.

Mr. Woods—You did not act in any proceeding for Mr. Sinclair?

Mr. Wood—It has been suggested by Mr. FitzGerald——

Mr. FitzGerald—I object to any question as to why he ceased to act for Mr. Sinclair.

Mr. Wood—What was the reason for your not acting?

The Judge disallowed the question.

The witness said that he knew the late Mr. Morris Harris well, and he was identifiable from the description given in the book—"eyes like a pair of periwinkles," etc. He understood the reference to the "twin grandchildren" to refer to the two Sinclairs, as also the reference to the "two Jews."

Mr. FitzGerald—Of course that was after Mr. Sinclair had gone into your office and drawn your attention to those pages?—Yes.

ALLEGED CRUELTY

Could you point to the part of the petition that alleged cruelty not only against Mr. Harris, but his two grandsons?—I don't remember what was put to the jury. It is stated here in the brief that the petitioner further charged the respondent that he did, on or about January 1st, 1906, commit a grossly offensive act by bringing a quantity of filth to the house and placing the same in the petitioner's bed. The petitioner also charged that the respondent had procured and encouraged his two grandsons to assault, beat and grossly insult the petitioner. Witness added that he had not got the certificate, and he did not worry about costs from Mr. Harris, because he was fair and decent. He could not say if the grandsons were convicted of cruelty.

Mr. Donald Chance produced a file of the Irish Independent for the year 1906, and Mr. FitzGerald said that he could not understand the witness being put in the box to prove what had already been given in evidence.

"It is," said Mr. FitzGerald, "only a little display as far as I can see."

Mr. Black—That is all I have to ask Mr. Chance.

Mr. FitzGerald—And I have nothing to ask, except that I am very glad to see him.

MR. BECKETT'S EVIDENCE

Samuel Beckett said he was not directly related to Mr. Sinclair, but Mr. William Sinclair's wife was his aunt. He knew the plaintiff for the past ten or twelve years. When he read the book he immediately identified the persons referred to as Mr. Harry and Mr. William Sinclair.

Mr. FitzGerald—How did you come to acquire this book?

Witness—I purchased it.

Was it at the suggestion of Mr. Sinclair that you got this book?—Partially.

When did he suggest to you that you should have a look at this book?—Early in May, I think.

I presume he told you he thought there was a grave libel on him?—He told me he thought he had been libelled.

You have made an affidavit in which you led the Court to believe that you were an impartial, independent person, but you forgot to tell the Court that it was your uncle-in-law who suggested that you should buy the book?

I said in my affidavit that my attention was attracted by the book because of the notoriety of the author and the advertisement it had received.

You said in your affidavit that you resided at Foxrock and that you were 21 years of age. Do you still reside at Foxrock?—Not now. I am residing in Paris.

We will come to that later. You describe yourself as an author. What have you written to justify that?—I have written verse, fiction and literary criticism.

MARCEL PROUST

Mr. FitzGerald—I think you have started on Marcel Proust. Was he a man who indulged in the psychology of sex?—I have not been aware of that.

But you have written about him. How long did it take before your book was banned by the Censorship Board of Ireland?—About six months.

I suggest it was banned because it was a blasphemous and obscene book?—I never discovered why it was banned.

Mr. FitzGerald then read an extract from the book describing a conversation in a 'bus between "The Polar Bear" and a member of the Jesuit Order, and asked the witness if that conversation was not a blasphemous caricature of Our Redeemer.

The witness said the characters were fictitious and that he could put words in the mouths of characters which he did not share.

Mr. FitzGerald—Do you call yourself a Christian, Jew, or Atheist?—None of the three.

In further cross-examination witness admitted that he had written another book called "Horoscope," with the letter "W" prefixed, and had it printed privately and circulated for the enjoyment of his friends. He said it was likely that his two uncles-in-law were among the small circle of friends for whom the book was printed.

Mr. J. Mitchel Amers said that he was a director of Hole and Co., corn importers, and that he recognised the Sinclair brothers on reading the passage in the book.

In cross-examination by Mr. FitzGerald, he said that it was not his wish to be in court at all. He had met Mr. Sinclair in Jammet's restaurant and discussed the matter.

LADY'S EVIDENCE

Mrs. Vivienne Ganly, in reply to Mr. E. M. Wood, stated that she was private secretary to Mr. Sinclair in his office in Nassau street prior to her marriage. In the month of May of this year she was staying in Enniskillen, and while she was there she came across the English edition of the book. She read it, and finished it on the 10th of May.

Mr. E. M. Wood—Did you read this passage: "Nassau street, Sackville street, Liffey street, where Naylor's is, and all along the quays"? Did you read the verses following?—I did.

Did these verses suggest anyone to you?—Yes. I said to myself it was Mr. Sinclair and his brother Willie.

Were you familiar with the appearance of Mr. Henry Morris Sinclair and Mr. Willie Sinclair?—Yes.

Did any of them wear gaiters?—Mr. Henry Sinclair wore them. They were a feature.

In further reply to counsel, witness said that she had read various passages in the book, and it conveyed to her mind Mr. Henry Morris Sinclair and his brother, Willie.

Cross-examined by Mr. FitzGerald, K.C., Mrs. Ganly said that she finished reading the book on the 10th of May.

Mr. FitzGerald—And this action began on the 11th May, the day before the King was crowned, and you read this book before the 10th. When did Mr. Sinclair discover from you that you had read this book?—When I came back.

When did you go in to see him?—I was back on the 14th. I went to see Mr. Sinclair possibly the next week.

Seumas Fenning, bookseller, Dawson street, Dublin, stated that he read a copy of the book before any proceedings were started, and immediately connected passages with the Sinclairs, and he saw Mr. Henry Sinclair almost at once.

In cross-examination by Mr. FitzGerald, witness said that he was a Catholic. He denied that he was born a Jew or was a convert to Catholicity.

Mr. FitzGerald—Where did you get that accent of yours? You didn't get it in the Gaeltacht. Have you been in England?—No.

Further questioned, witness said that he carried on a postal book business in Dawson street, and had done business from time to time with Mr. Sinclair during the past five years. He first met him about 1932. He had lived at Newcastle-on-Tyne for a few months.

Mr. FitzGerald—Newcastle-on-Tyne must have a very strong influence in phonetics.

Mr. Wood, K.C.—Are you a well-known billiard player, to the extent that you have won a billiards championship?—I have about ten championships in this city.

Mr. Justice O'Byrne said that he did not see any relevance in this.

Mr. Wood—It is suggested that he came from nowhere, out of the clouds, and that he is an apostate as regards religion.

This closed the plaintiff's case, and the further hearing was adjourned until to-day.

DUBLIN CIRCUIT COURT

DECREE AGAINST UNDER-SHERIFF

UNLAWFUL SEIZURE OF PROPERTY

(BEFORE JUDGE DAVITT.)

Charles Corcoran, solicitor, whose offices are in Fleet street, Dublin, sued the County Under-Sheriff, Mr. William McCracken, for £50 damages for the unlawful seizure of his property, the furniture of his residence, 5 Claremont Villas, Glenageary, on May 26th, 1937.

It was stated that Miss Margaret Butterly obtained a Court decree for £33 11s. 7d., including costs, against Mrs. Rose Corcoran, wife of the plaintiff, for slander. The Sheriff's men entered the plaintiff's residence and said that they had a warrant for seizure of furniture if the sum of £33 11s. 7d. was not paid to them. When Mr. Corcoran arrived home in the evening he told the bailiffs that the furniture was his, and not his wife's property, and that they had no legal right to seize any of it. Prior to that date Mr. Corcoran had made a declaration to the Sheriff that the furniture was his and that it ought not to be seized. He paid £33 11s. 7d. to the men under protest, just to induce them to leave the house.

Mrs. Corcoran, in evidence, stated that the two bailiffs waited outside her door until she arrived. They told her that they had instructions to seize so much as would satisfy the warrant and costs. She told them that the furniture belonged to Mr. Corcoran and not to her. One of the men said that they had instructions to seize, no matter who it belonged to. The only property she had of her own were a few rings and brooches, and such like.

Mr. Kavanagh (cross-examining)—When you were married what did your father give you?

Mrs. Corcoran—He gave me his blessing. (Laughter.)

The Judge gave the plaintiff a decree for £36.

PAIN IN THE STOMACH

Nature's Warning

Never disregard slight pain or discomfort after meals. That is Nature's warning of trouble in the offing. It starts in a small way—some minor digestive trouble. If you do nothing or take cheap "kill or cure" remedies, look out for trouble! Undigested food begins fermenting inside you, forming gas that gives you a "bloated" feeling, spreading poison throughout your body. That's why you feel so languid, so heavy, when your stomach isn't in good order. And that's why you feel fit for anything, a fine appetite, lively and marvellously alert when your stomach is clean, healthy and poison-free.

The problem is how to make the stomach clean safely. You dare not play tricks with your stomach. So-called remedies—even the once favoured bicarbonate and home remedies—might be positively dangerous, are certainly doubtful in their effects. But MACLEAN BRAND Stomach Powder is a safe remedy for all stomach troubles, from slight Indigestion to serious ulcers. It is a certain remedy. It is a remarkably quick remedy. Take it after meals—feel your stomach pains glide rapidly away! In a few minutes you are quit of them!

But remember to look always for the signature "ALEX. C. MACLEAN" on the bottle—your assurance of genuine Maclean Brand Stomach Powder and whole-hearted relief from stomach pains! 1/6, 2/3 and 5/3. Powder or Tablets.

DUBLIN DISTRICT COURT

DANGEROUS DRIVING PROSECUTION

DRIVING LICENCE WITHDRAWN

(BEFORE MR. HANNON.)

Daniel O'Leary, Main street, Blackrock, was fined £20 for dangerous driving, and disqualified from holding a driving licence for twelve months. A charge of having been drunk in charge of a motor car was dismissed, as were also charges of not exercising reasonable care and of driving without a licence.

Mr. Hannon said that in the drunkenness charge he had been influenced greatly by the fact that the impact causing the damage to the steering wheel produced in court must have been considerable, and it was incredible that the driver behind it had not been seriously injured.

Mr. H. Hare (instructed by Mr. J. P. Collins) appeared for the defence.

The case was a sequel to an accident at Stradbally on 30th October.

Mr. Hannon said he thought that when a doctor was called in in a drunkenness case all the data which the Guards had should be put before him.

SELLING RACING TIPS

Hector Gray, with an address in Buckingham street, Dublin, was charged with having caused an obstruction at Foster place on Sunday. He was remanded for a week. It was stated that Gray was selling racing tips, and that he refused to stop when asked by a Civic Guard.

CLERGYMAN IN MOTOR COLLISION

FINED FOR DANGEROUS DRIVING

(BEFORE MR LENNON.)

The Rev. J. E. Oulton, 35 Ailesbury road, Dublin, was fined £15 for dangerous driving. Evidence was given that on 1st May a car driven by the defendant collided at the corner of Shrewsbury road with a motor cycle driven by Thomas Granville, 17 Herbert place. Granville was severely injured, suffering a fractured skull and a broken arm.

Sergeant T. Hingerty gave evidence of a statement by the defendant, in which he said that he saw the motor cyclist about thirty-five yards away when he was about to turn into Shrewsbury road. His horn was sounded and his direction indicator extended, but the cyclist seemed to be unaware that he was going to turn and bumped into the left of the radiator.

ALLEGED ATTEMPT TO FIRE CASE

(BEFORE MR. HANNAN.)

Francis Cleary, aged 36 years, of Home Farm road, a motor coachbuilder, was returned for trial on a charge of having on 18th October at Sir John Rogerson's quay, Dublin, wilfully and maliciously attempted to set on fire a wooden case containing motor parts, the property of McCairns Motors, by spilling petrol on the case. He was admitted to bail.

ADULTERATION OF OIL

(BEFORE MR. LENNON.)

Richard Mollhagga, trading as the Northlight Razor Blade Co., was fined £1 for having sold camphorated oil deficient in the percentage of camphor which it should contain to the extent of 90 per cent., and adulterated with mineral oil.

Mr. T. A. Burke (for the Corporation) prosecuted, and Mr. A. O'Connor (instructed by Messrs. Potterton and Co.) defended.

Mr. T. F. Bacon (instructed by Messrs. Joyce and Joyce) appeared for the plaintiff.

Mr. W. J. Kavanagh, solicitor, appeared for the Sheriff.

INJURY CLAIM SETTLED

In the case of Joan Jenkins, a minor, 31 Gardiner's place, against James Domican, carrier, N Block, Oliver Bond House, Bridgefoot street, for damages for personal injuries, Mr. F. Sherry (instructed by Mr. McGonagle), for the claimant, said that a settlement provided for payment of £54 4s. and costs.

The Judge made the settlement a rule of Court.

Messrs. W. G. Bradley and Sons appeared for the defendant.

CONTRACTS.

JOINT COMMITTEE OF MANAGEMENT OF MONAGHAN MENTAL HOSPITAL.
TO BUILDING CONTRACTORS.

PROPOSED NEW HOSPITAL PREMISES AT MENTAL HOSPITAL, MONAGHAN.

The Joint Committee of Management of the above Mental Hospital will, at their Meeting in the Court-house, Cavan, on Thursday, 16th December, 1937, consider Tenders from competent contractors for the above work.

The Plans and Specifications have been prepared by Cormac T. McLynn, Esq., Architect, and Nicholas O'Dwyer, Esq., Consulting Engineer, Veritas House, Lower Abbey street, Dublin, and may be inspected at the Offices of the Architect and Engineer at any time between the hours of 9.30 a.m. and 5 p.m., Saturdays excepted, or at the Offices of the Joint Committee, Mental Hospital, Monaghan, during said hours.

The Bills of Quantities may be obtained from Messrs. Cullen and O'Brien, Quantity Surveyors, 48 Grafton street, Dublin, or at the Offices of the Joint Committee, Mental Hospital, Monaghan, on a deposit of £15 (by guaranteed cheque), which will be returned on receipt of a bona-fide Tender not subsequently withdrawn.

The Joint Committee do not bind themselves to accept the lowest or any Tender, and any Tender proposed to be accepted will be subject to the approval of the Minister for Local Government and Public Health.

The accepted contractor will be required to enter into a bond with an approved Insurance Company in the total amount of the contract for the proper and full completion of the contract, such bond to be drawn up by the Solicitor to the Joint Committee of Management and at the expense of the contractor. Contractors tendering will be required to deposit with their Tenders, in a separate covering, a cheque for £200 (guaranteed by a Bank), and for which a separate receipt must be obtained, returnable when the bond is signed and stamped.

The General Conditions are those as approved by the Royal Institute of the Architects of Ireland, together with the special conditions as set forth in the Bills of Quantities. Tenders must be marked "Tender for the Proposed New Mental Hospital Premises at Monaghan." The priced Bill of Quantities, with prices and extensions completed in ink, to be forwarded at the same time but under separate sealed covers. Tenders and Bills of Quantities should be addressed to "The Presiding Chairman, Joint Committee of Management of the Cavan and Monaghan Mental Hospital," so as to reach him not later than 11 o'clock on the 15th December, 1937.

N.B.—Trades Union conditions and rates of wages as operating in the Town and County of Monaghan must be recognised.

By Order,
WILLIAM J. COYNE, Resident Medical Superintendent.
Mental Hospital, Monaghan,
20th November, 1937.

CORPORATION OF DUBLIN.
TENDERS FOR ERECTION OF WROT IRON FENCING AND GATES—ELLENFIELD HOUSING SCHEME.

Tenders are invited for the supply and fixing of Wrot Iron Fencing and Gates at Ellenfield Housing Scheme in accordance with specification, General Conditions of Contract, and particulars obtainable from the Works Manager on the site, where Tender Forms may also be obtained.

Sealed Tenders, endorsed "Tender for Fencing and Gates," addressed to the City Manager and Town Clerk must be lodged at the Housing and Supplies Department, Exchange Buildings, Lord Edward street, Dublin, not later than 12 noon on Saturday, 4th December, 1937.

The lowest or any tender will not necessarily be accepted.

P. J. HERNON,
City Manager and Town Clerk.

The Irish Times

TUESDAY, NOVEMBER 23, 1937.

NEWS SUMMARY

IRELAND

Fifty-six amendments, fifty from the Labour Party, have been received for the Committee stage of the Seanad Electoral (Panel Members) Bill.—(Page 7.)

In formally opening Aonach na Nodlag in Cork last night, Mr. Lemass, Minister for Industry and Commerce, said that Irish goods should be as well made and as cheap as those imported. He said also that he was determined that anything that would delay or destroy the industrial development of the country must be removed.—(Page 7.)

Over 2,500 people attended a demonstration by the Independent Unionist Party in Belfast last night. Speeches were made condemning the alleged inaction of the official party, and calling for the rejection "of the representatives of officialdom at Stormont."—(Page 7.)

GREAT BRITAIN

Mr. Philip de László, the distinguished portrait painter, died at his Hampstead residence yesterday.—(Page 8.)

Mr. Eden, in a statement in the Commons on the Brazil debts, said that, unfortunately, the latest information indicated that a definite decision had been taken by the Brazilian Government to suspend payment pending the conclusion of a new agreement. His Majesty's Government had under serious consideration the new situation which had thus arisen.—(Page 8.)

Lord Halifax, on his return to London last night, saw the Premier and the Foreign Secretary, and reported on his conversations in Berlin. It is possible that a statement on the subject will be made in the House of Commons to-morrow.—(Page 7.)

ABROAD

The Japanese have captured another city.—(Page 7.)

The Far East Conference has adjourned until to-morrow.—(Page 7.)

SPORTING

At Warwick yesterday Huxley won the Dawkins Stakes.—(Page 10.)

FINANCIAL

London Stock Markets were again in dull mood yesterday, and further sharp losses were marked all round, Industrials being particularly weak.—(Page 3.)

Gold was 1d. up at 140s. 1d. per oz., and sales totalled £232,000. Silver prices were unchanged.—(Page 3.)

Dublin Market was of modern dimensions, with most attention paid to British Industrials, which relapsed rather sharply. Home Funds were firm, while local issues moved irregularly.—(Page 3.)

Pharaoh's Heart

M. Stalin has been making great play with his new Constitution for a long time past. Precisely why he should wish Russia to enjoy the blessings of bourgeois democracy nobody knows, but, at all events, the Constitution has been accorded an enthusiastic welcome throughout the U.S.S.R., whose people are more than ever convinced—so we are told—that they are happy above other peoples. The Constitution includes the establishment of two Houses of Parliament, of which the Lower House is to be elected by the free, secret, and equal vote of every responsible citizen, while the Upper House will be chosen, by a more complicated process, to represent the interests of the various nationalities. It all looks very good; but any Russian who thought that he would have a decisive voice in the election of his legislators has been undeceived sadly within the last few days. The first necessity of the new Constitution is an election of members for the Lower House, or Union Council; and the official list of candidates has just been issued. Voting will not be difficult; for there is only one candidate for every constituency, and he, of course, is the Communist Party's nominee. The worker or peasant, therefore, who had hoped to exercise his power of political thinking over a large and diverse field of candidates will have little opportunity: he may vote for the candidate, or he may stroke the name out as an indication of disapproval; but there can be no question of a dangerous Opposition in the Union Council. It appears that the people have not taken well to this crippling of their anticipated liberty. Rival candidates were put forward in certain areas, but were persuaded—mainly by the kindly exhortations of M. Stalin's police—to desist. One of them was shot.

The election will take place on December 12th. When the results are declared, and the Lower democratic House of the new Parliament is formally inaugurated, Russia will be just as close to democracy as she is to-day. As the outside observer sees it, Russia's government is a dictatorship, as stringent and as tyrannous as ever was known upon earth, and Stalin's supremacy is not less real because he never has 'aid claim to any more definitive title than that of Secretary-General of the Communist Party. It is certain that he will be Prime Minister, or President, or whatever they may call the head of the new Government; and the only difference will be the investment of his authority with a spurious appearance of democratic "constitutionalism." He has taken good care to dispose of any objections, not only by his one-way panel of candidates for the Lower House, but, even more effectively, by the "purge" of recent months. Few rivals can be left to the new Throne of All the Russias. Even Tukachevsky, that magnificent soldier who hurled back the armies of half the world in the early days of the Revolution, has been liquidated; every man, great or small, who could be a menace to Stalin has faced the firing-squad, or, if public expediency demanded mercy, has been exiled or degraded. It is interesting to see how M. Stalin has borrowed from the Fascist States. His latest "purge" bears a curious resemblance—though it has been on an even more imposing scale—to Herr Hitler's blood-bath of June, 1934, and, even as men perished in that massacre who had fought side by side with Herr Hitler from the beginning of National-Socialism, so, many of the makers of the Russian Revolution—the Bolshevist "Old Guard"—have met their doom. Only a year or two ago it looked as if the iron hand of terrorism were about to be raised from Russia's neck. It has descended again more heavily than ever, and the thin section of freedom is maintained only in a Constitution that can deceive nobody.

The wandering Trotsky, no doubt, derives a perverse satisfaction from these events in Russia. He, at least, remained faithful to the principles of Communism, and must smile wryly to see that his name has provided Russia with a new word, comprehensive enough to do duty as a synonym for high treason, "sabotage" and every possible form of activity that might cause M. Stalin to lose a wink of sleep. He surveys a strange scene. On the one hand, Stalin confirms his grip upon Russia, forcing his country relentlessly further not only from the practice of Communism, but from any conception of liberty. On the other hand, he strives with might and main to weave a huge veil of democratic forms designed to persuade the world that allegations of tyranny are untrue. Stalin realises that the world faces a conflict of political faiths—or, as they are called in these days, "ideologies." Democracy, represented by Great Britain, France, and the United States, confronts the Fascist crusaders, Italy, Germany, and Japan, who are Russia's implacable enemies. He realises, too, that a Soviet tyranny will not readily obtain the friendship and alliance of the great democracies—even the Franco-Soviet pact is tenuous—and he sees is only hope in a pretence of democracy. The question is whether his potential allies will permit themselves to be deceived, or will lump Russia rather in the same category with the other dictatorships. Certainly there is a closer affinity between modern Russia and modern Germany than between Great Britain or the United States and Russia. How can a nation where freedom of speech does not exist, where the Press is controlled with the utmost rigour, where even a whisper against the Kremlin can be punished—and is punished—by death, where the ballot-box possesses no meaning, claim to align itself with the democracies? It is a sorry choice for any man to make—between the "totalitarianism" of Italy and Germany and the "totalitarianism" of Soviet Russia. Yet the democracies may be forced to make it before any long time has passed.

The Changing Abbey

One of the shrewdest critics of drama and acting in London holds the opinion—with him the opinion amounts almost to an obsession—that the people of Ireland are all born actors. He is probably not singular in harbouring this notion, because when a company of Irish players appears in London the critics release the brake on their critical faculty and indulge in a spate of superlatives. It may be, of course, that this has now become traditional, since those days when the late C. E. Montague whooped with delight at the prospect of seeing an Irish company. It was he who thought that the naturalistic acting of the Abbey Theatre was the finest to be seen anywhere in his day, as it was he who wrote in ecstatic terms about the quiet demeanour of the players on the stage and their effacement when the action of the play dictated that course. If in Miss Maire O'Neill's "Pegeen Mike" Montague saw the finest acting of his day, as he believed, it was because from an almost statuesque pose Miss O'Neill could come into action with the speed and force of a discharged torpedo. It would seem that the days of quietude and naturalism in acting have passed from the Abbey Theatre, and that there has been adopted in their stead an acting style in which the "star" is encountered, at least in embryo. To discover the beginnings of this change it is necessary to go back many years, but during the past few years it has become increasingly marked. We publish to-day a letter in which attention is drawn to this change in the acting and to other notable changes in the methods of the Abbey Theatre. When the directors announced that a different policy would be pursued the announcement was welcomed generally by habitual patrons of the Abbey Theatre, who had reached a state bordering upon boredom with the so-called "peasant" play. While the announcement of a change in policy was welcomed, however, there was the ardent desire that it should not be made at the expense of everything which had made the Abbey Theatre distinctively national, and at the same time a definite contribution to the art of the theatre. Certainly, we should have the masterpieces of the Continental theatre; but they should be presented in the traditional style of the Abbey Theatre. In the event the masterpieces of the contemporary theatre have not been staged at the Abbey Theatre; instead, as our correspondent points out, there has been a subtle reversal of almost everything for which the Abbey Theatre achieved fame in the past. It must be remembered that the Abbey Theatre was founded, and for the greater part of its career has functioned, as a playwright's theatre; a theatre in which the dramatist might make experiments for which the commercial theatre had neither time nor place. When emphasis is placed upon the actor, or—and this is even more important—upon the producer, the status of the dramatist inevitably must be reduced to one of dependence. That there is a place in the theatre for the producer and for the actor need not be denied in order to insist that the author must be dominant. What the changed policy at the Abbey Theatre seems to mean to those at present in control is a complete cleavage with the tradition of the theatre, and an effort to emulate the more showy and more personally forceful productions elsewhere. It is true that there has been a departure from the team-work of the past, and the temptation to seek the spotlight, which has displaced the footlights, is lamentably apparent. The quiet naturalism of the past has given place to a nervous fussiness, in which individuals seem to strive for themselves rather than for their part in the play. Such artifices as the stridency of newsboys in the auditorium, and the community singing in the audience, never ought to have found their way into the Abbey Theatre; they distorted its aims and shattered its tradition more effectively than a whole season of foreign plays could have done. There must be an examination of conscience among the directors of the Abbey Theatre; they must reconsider their ways, and develop the past instead of breaking with it.

C. B. Moffat

We print to-day with much pleasure a letter signed by a group of influential Irishmen, proposing that a public testimonial should be made to Mr. C. B. Moffat. Mr. Moffat is no stranger to the readers of this newspaper. For many years he has been one of our most assiduous correspondents; and his purpose always has been the same—namely, to defend the interests of creatures that are unable to defend themselves. He probably is one of Europe's greatest authorities on birds. All his life he has been a keen student of natural history. He has devoted an enormous amount of time to this study, and for thirty-five years he has been an active member of the Dublin Naturalists' Field Club. Mr. Moffat has been, and continues to be, the moving force behind the admirable work of the Irish Society for the Protection of Wild Birds; and it was largely as a result of his efforts that the Wild Birds Protection Act of 1930 was passed through Dáil Eireann. As the signatories of the letter declare, the more enlightened attitude of the general public in Ireland towards our Irish birds is due more to Mr. Moffat than to any other individual in the country. In season and out of season he has not ceased to uphold the cause of the birds. If an indignant farmer should protest against the depredations of this or that type of bird in regard to his crops or his fruit, Mr. Moffat would enter the lists immediately on behalf of the alleged offender. He would produce a score of reasons why the bird, far from doing damage, actually was helping the farmer; and his letters have been written in such a charming and convincing style that the most hard-hearted have been affected by them. It was said once of a leader writer on a Dublin newspaper, who had been instructed by his editor to write an article on "Rat Week," that he wrote of the rats as if they were an oppressed nationality. Mr. C. B. Moffat writes about the birds as if they were his personal friends, and we are certain that he would find something good to say about a flock of vultures. We are delighted that some of his admirers have decided that the time has come when some public recognition should be given to the life work of a man who, throughout all the distractions of this country's recent history, never has been deflected by a hair's breadth from his self-imposed task. As a great humanitarian as well as a great naturalist, C. B. Moffat has deserved well of his fellow-countrymen. In the sphere of activity which he has made his own he has no superior.

Telephone Tests

The officials of the Free State's telephone service—which has not been in its best form for some time past—may draw fresh heart from an item of cross-Channel news. Henceforward, when the indignant subscribers complains that, however carefully he has dialled 77777, he has been connected with 53421, or that his conversation has been interrupted by the sardonic laughter of another subscriber, who has been listening all the time, the Post Office can retort: "Blame yourself!" The Telephone Development Association of Great Britain has discovered that the ordinary user of the telephone does not know half enough about either his instrument or the service. It has gone so far as to institute a certificate of proficiency in "the correct use of the telephone for business purposes," for which an examination was held last week. Out of thirty-three candidates fifteen passed, of whom fourteen were girls. They were asked such questions as: "You discover an outbreak of fire in the office. How would you communicate with the fire brigade?" and "How would you call a local subscriber whose name is not in the telephone directory?" In addition there were practical tests. Candidates had to send a telegram by 'phone, to find names with speed and precision in the directory, and to spell names "by analogy." A similar examination on this side of the Channel might yield fruitful results—though we doubt whether the Department of Posts and Telegraphs would have the hardihood to set such a question as appears in the English test: "What is the procedure (a) when you get a wrong number; (b) when the called subscriber is engaged, and (c) when you are cut off during a conversation?" As things are to-day, the examinee might be impelled to reply: "I should do precisely the same as (a) when I fail to get any number at all; (b) when, having rung the G.P.O. to find out why, I get no answer from there either, and (c) when I fail to get a dialling note." More cautiously he might retort that he would (a) send a telegram; (b) summon a messenger; or (c) forget about it. In either circumstances it is improbable that either Mr. Oscar Traynor or Mr. P. S. O'Hegarty would allow him a pass; but it is even less probable that they would hold an examination.

WEATHER FORECAST

General Inference.—An anti-cyclone to the north-west of the British Isles is extending south-east. There will be fair periods in most areas, with local rain at times. Temperatures will be rather above normal in the south, but about average elsewhere.

Ireland.—Moderate north-east winds; cloudy; occasional rain; average temperature; local frost.

Sea Passages.—Moderate north-east winds; fair periods; rain locally; visibility mainly good; sea moderate.

UNIONIST REVOLT IN THE NORTH

Six Counties Represented at Great Meeting

DEMAND FOR END OF STORMONT OFFICIALDOM

"Party That Let Grass Grow in Mills and Shipyards"

FROM OUR REPORTER,

BELFAST, Monday.

SOME 2,500 people crowded the Ulster Hall here to-night, when one of the largest political meetings for many years was held by the Independent Unionists.

Representatives were present on the platform from every county in Northern Ireland. There were only a few timorous interruptions, and the speakers' remarks were greeted with frequent bursts of cheers and applause. Every seat was occupied, and even the aisles and doorways were crowded. In the front row of the audience was Mr. J. Beattie, Labour M.P. for Pottinger.

Councillor W. Wilton, who presided, said that at the present time there was more dissatisfaction in Ulster than at any other time in her history. There were about 90,000 unemployed, and their only hope was for the young men to go to England or join the Army. It was time that the people did something.

INDEPENDENT DEMONSTRATION

The whole trend of Ulster legislation, said Councillor Wilton, was to curtail the liberty of individual citizens, to dictate to the farmer and merchant his every action. The Ulster people heard a lot about selling their country if they deserted their official Unionist Party, but he had a feeling that if that party got back to Stormont for another five years it was they who would sell out Ulster.

The official Unionist Party told the people that Ulster was a garden where the long grass cut itself, and where the weeds never grew; but it was that party that let the grass grow in the shipyards, mills and factories. They had made little or no attempt to get work for the people, and the friends at Stormont were now alarmed because Independent Unionist principles were bearing fruit in upsetting a one-sided indefensible party.

DEPRIVED OF RIGHTS

The people had been deprived of their civil rights. Under no Government in the world could they have fewer civil rights than they had under the present crowd at Stormont. The people were over-taxed and high rated, and much of their money was being spent in upholding offices which they did not need. They could no longer tie themselves to a policy which was robbing them of the right to live. The policy at Stormont had been one of surrender, and in surrendering they had served their friends to the detriment of the Ulster people. The country was now anything but a happy place for the strong and industrious, and it was a hell for the poor.

A "DEPRESSED AREA"

Mr. T. Henderson, M.P., said they lit a beacon that night whose light would spread throughout the length and breadth of Northern Ireland. It had been said in the Press that Sir Dawson Bates was going to retire. (Derisive cheers.) They might as well try to shift the Rock of Gibraltar with a damp squib as try to get rid of these people. There was, he went on, another gentleman—Sir Basil Brooke—down in Fermanagh they had another name for him—who declared that the Independents would divide the Unionist Party. The Independents wanted to divide the high salaries received by Cabinet Ministers. They regretted the illness of the Prime Minister, but if ever there was a time when they needed a healthy man at the head of affairs this was the time.

Northern Ireland had been described as a "depressed area." They were not getting their fair share of armament contracts for Britain, although the Clyde, where the people had a greater admiration for the Red Flag than the Union Jack, had got contracts worth millions.

He moved a resolution pledging support for the Independent Unionist Party in their efforts to find work for the unemployed, strengthen existing industries, and secure new industries for the North.

KILLED INITIATIVE

Mr. Harding, prospective Independent candidate for Cromac Division, said they used to hear a lot of boasting about Belfast's tobacco factory, its shipyards, linen industries, etc.; but to-day things had changed. One of their greatest distilleries had gone out of business, and he wondered if the linen and shipbuilding businesses were not in a fair way to follow suit. One of the reasons why people had stopped boosting "Ulster" was because the Government had killed initiative and restricted personal effort in that area. The day of enterprise seemed to be at an end, and it would continue to be if the people of the North did not begin to think independently. Independence was the keynote of the Ulster character for centuries, but to-day it seemed to be dying.

Proceeding, the speaker declared that Stormont was "a family party," and every one of them seemed to be related to the other. (Laughter.) The only thing he was afraid of was that the Government was going to run out of relations.

In conclusion he quoted figures showing imports from across the Channel into Northern Ireland, and asserted that the six counties to-day were rapidly becoming a dumping ground. Surplus material that could not be sold elsewhere was dumped in Northern Ireland at a reduced figure. Wages were paid elsewhere. If this continued much longer they would soon be taking in each other's washing in Ulster.

REFERENCE TO FREE STATE

Mr. R. J. Hale, of Banbridge, Deputy President of the Ulster Farmers' Union, proposed the motion pledging support to the Independent Unionist candidates in their efforts to have removed the existing vexatious restrictions which are hampering the farming community.

Mr. Hale said that he was speaking only as a County Down farmer, and the farmers were not pleased with the handling they had received from the present Government. Up to the present day the Government had not spent one penny of the ratepayers' money on the upkeep of agriculture. "They have used your loyalty," he declared, "to make you slaves to them and to their party. They have bound you hand and foot, so that if you even criticise their policy they tell you that you will be in the Free State in the morning."

The farmer was de-rated in 1929 to silence dissatisfaction, but under the Revaluation Act he was paying twice and three times as much as ever before.

THE TRANSPORT MONOPOLY

Referring to the Road Transport Board, Mr. Hale said that by virtue of inefficiency and high salaries the railways had left themselves unworkable and unbearable. The Farmers' Association produced a system that saved the situation and served themselves, but the Government could not leave them alone. Road transport was killing the railways, and the men in high places were not getting their dividends. It was for that reason that the people's self-evolved system of efficient transport was suppressed for a Government monopoly.

"I see in this meeting to-night," said Mr. Hale, "the dawn of better days for Ulster. We shall assert ourselves once more, and we shall again be a province of free men."

Mr. R. H. Gibney, of Banbridge, who seconded the resolution, said that the people who had come to the meeting probably would read in the morning papers that there had been a meeting of rebels in the Ulster Hall on the previous night. All that Ulster wanted was a fair deal, and she was not getting that from the Craigavon Government.

AGAINST EXTRAVAGANCE

Councillor R. Hill, proposing a resolution against Government extravagance, with particular protest against the Revaluation Act, said that the British Government never would have coerced Ulster to surrender to have home rule or to go out from under the Union Jack. Their brothers in Cavan, Monaghan and Donegal, and even in the South and West, would still be living under the Union Jack if the place-hunting politicians had not sold the pass and betrayed the Covenant.

"Ulster," he said, "is in revolt, and it is not a revolt of guns and bombs, it is a revolt by experience and education." Was it necessary for the Government to make so many excuses? An old French proverb said that he who excuses himself accuses himself.

Mr. Edwin Thompson said that if they had another five years of misgovernment Belfast would be down and out. This was the most costly and extravagant Government that ever ruled a small State.

At the conclusion of the meeting the Chairman, Mr. Wilton, declared, amidst cheers, that the thirty-six representatives of officialdom in Stormont must go, and they must be forced to go at all costs. The people would never regret having whipped those "traitors" out of Ulster.

LORD HALIFAX'S RETURN

STATEMENT POSSIBLE ON WEDNESDAY

Lord Halifax last night reported to the Prime Minister and Mr. Eden (Foreign Secretary), a few hours after his return from the Berlin talks with Herr Hitler, General Goering, Baron von Neurath and other German leaders.

Although Lord Halifax did not reach London until the late afternoon he was with Mr. Eden soon afterwards, and shortly after six o'clock both of them saw Mr. Neville Chamberlain at No. 10 Downing street.

A full report of the conversations in which he has taken part will be made by Lord Halifax to the Cabinet on Wednesday, and a brief statement is also expected to be made in the House of Commons.

Meanwhile, it is learned in official quarters, no statement will be issued.

It remains with the Cabinet and the Foreign Office advisers to decide on the steps that may be taken to follow up the frank and comprehensive, but, nevertheless, informal, talks which Lord Halifax has had in Germany. That there will be further conversations seems likely, but the report that Baron von Neurath (German Foreign Minister) may visit London was described last night in official circles as "pure conjecture."

The impression in London at the moment is that a satisfactory start has been made, but that it would be unwise to expect any sensational developments.

In German circles it is felt that the next move rests with Great Britain, while Lord Halifax, in a cautious statement, has contented himself with saying: "If we have succeeded in opening the door now I hope we will not let it be closed again."

The task of Lord Halifax was to establish personal contacts with those responsible for Germany's foreign policy, and thus to smooth the course of relations between Germany and Great Britain. His initial task is, therefore, ended, and the next step, whether it be made by Britain or Germany, will not be taken before his report to the Cabinet has been very carefully studied.

FIRE EXPERT'S VISIT

Colonel Charles B. Symons, C.M.G., D.S.O. (centre), who is at present in Dublin to advise the Irish Free State Government and Dublin Corporation on fire protection, talking to Lieutenant J. Howard and Captain J. S. Connolly when he visited the Central Fire Station at Tara street yesterday.

THE JAPANESE ADVANCE

WEALTHY CITY CAPTURED

PROPOSED NEUTRAL ZONE FOR NANKING

WUSIH—pivotal point in China's second "Hindenburg Line"—was occupied yesterday by Japanese troops, according to reports from Japanese scouting 'planes.

Situated 113 miles from Nanking and having a population of over 200,000, Wusih is the wealthiest of the interior cities of the Province of Kiangsu.

Chinese troops are reported to be fleeing in confusion to the West towards Changchow, relentlessly pursued by Japanese military and naval 'planes.

The fall of Wusih, it is claimed in Tokyo, means the definite failure of the Chinese plan to resist the Japanese advance westward.

Japanese forces are now successfully pushing westward along both the northern and southern shores of the Taihu lake.

Nanking had its first air raid for weeks yesterday, but no bombs were dropped.

A 'plane dropped a message urging General Chiang Kai-shek to surrender. Shortly afterwards a squadron of Japanese 'planes appeared in the sky. They were engaged by Chinese fighters, and one machine, the nationality of which is unknown, crashed.

DEFENCE OF NANKING

Several influential Chinese commanders, it is understood, favour withdrawing the Chinese forces from Nanking well before the Japanese come within gunfire range. They evidently wish to save the capital from destruction.

Meanwhile, fresh troops, about twelve divisions strong, are reported to be massing near Nanking for the defence of the capital.

The British Embassy staff and the majority of the American staff left Nanking yesterday for Hankow.

SOVIET 'PLANES

The aerial combats over Nanking have marked the first appearance of Soviet 'planes, according to reliable observers there, says a Reuter Nanking telegram.

These state that a Chinese 'plane which brought down a Japanese bomber was an ultra-fast machine of a type not hitherto employed by the Chinese Air Force.

It is learned on reliable authority that the Chinese Government has bought a considerable number of 'planes from the U.S.S.R., which sent them to Urumchi, in the Province of Sinkiang. Soviet instructors have been training Chinese pilots.

RICE CARGO HELD UP

The unloading of 25,000 bags of rice from Saigon from the British steamer Kaying, which is anchored in the Whangpoo, within a hundred yards of H.M.S. Folkestone and H.M.S. Falmouth, was suddenly stopped yesterday.

Unloading was stopped following objections by the Japanese Navy, who said that the rice was being imported by the Central China Trust for military use.

Negotiations are now in progress to have part of the cargo unloaded for the use of the destitute in the Jacquinot refugee zone of Nantao.

It is believed that the Japanese will agree, especially in view of the fact that General Matsui, the Japanese Military Commander-in Chief, and Vice-Admiral Hasegawa, the Naval Commander-in-Chief, have each contributed 10,000 dollars for the relief of refugees.

A plan is being formulated by the foreign Embassies and the Chinese officials for the creation of a neutral zone at Nanking. The plan will be presented presently to the Japanese High Command.

TO RECOGNISE FRANCO

The Emperor of Japan will shortly sign the official act of recognition of the Spanish Nationalist Government, says a Spanish Press service message from Salamanca received in London by Reuter.

ANTI-BRITISH CAMPAIGN

An anti-British mass meeting, held in the Hibiya Park Hall, in the centre of Tokyo, unanimously passed a resolution calling upon the Japanese nation: (1) To discard the pro-British principles which have been accepted for many years; (2) to abolish all pro-British societies and institutions throughout Japan; (3) to give up the custom of depending on British sympathy and economic relations; (4) to demand the maintenance of a strict watch on Hong Kong, which is described as a British base for supporting China, and (5) to permit no interference by Britain or any other Power in connection with the Chinese conflict.

LAST SESSION OF PARLIAMENT

TO-DAY'S OPENING BY GOVERNOR

FROM OUR CORRESPONDENT.

BELFAST, Monday.

The Parliament of Northern Ireland will be opened with the customary State ceremonial by His Grace the Governor at Stormont to-morrow afternoon. This will be the fifth and final session of the present Parliament, and it is anticipated that the general election will take place in the spring.

A full programme of legislation for the session will be outlined in the King's Speech, the principal measure being a bill to afford further facilities for the establishment of new industries in the area.

In connection with the opening of Parliament the Prime Minister gave his usual dinner party at Stormont Castle to-night.

Town Hall Sold for Ten Pounds

Strange Irish Auction

FROM OUR CORRESPONDENT.

TULLAMORE, Monday.

EDENDERRY Town Hall, the local weighing machine and the interests of the Town Commissioners in the fairs and markets were sold by public auction to-day to Mr. Gardiner, a representative of the firm of Messrs. A. and L. Goodbody, solicitors, Tullamore, for £20 10s.0d.

Ten pounds were paid for the hall, ten pounds for the tolls and ten shillings for the weighing machine.

The sale took place in the County Registrar's office. The only persons present were Mr. J. Rogers, County Registrar, and his assistant, Mr. Ryan; Mr. W. J. Craig, Law Adviser to the Town Commissioners, and Miss Byrne, Town Clerk, and Press representatives.

No local or public interest appeared to be taken in the proceedings, which were formal.

ANCIENT DOCUMENT

The County Registrar, in opening the proceedings, read the conditions of sale, and Mr. Craig exhibited an ancient document, dated 31st January, 1675. This was a patent granting the right to the Marquis of Downshire to levy tolls at the local fairs and markets.

Mr. Craig stated that the hall was held in fee-simple, and that the Sheriff was not entitled to sell it. The hall had cost £5,000 to build, and £1,800 had been spent in its repair. Notice of this, he said, had been served on all concerned, and if anybody bought it they did so at their own risk.

Mr. Gardiner then bid £10 for the hall, at which price it was knocked down.

"It is only once in a lifetime, as the auctioneers say, that a chance like this occurs," humourously remarked the County Registrar.

Mr. Gardiner then bid ten shilling for the scales and ten pounds for the interest of the Commissioners in the fairs and markets, at which figure they were knocked down to him.

The County Registrar then stated that he would adjourn the sale of the furniture in the hall to four o'clock in the afternoon in Edenderry, to give prospective purchasers a chance to see what they were buying.

FURNITURE SOLD

FROM OUR CORRESPONDENT.

EDENDERRY, Monday.

In the afternoon Mr. M. G. Ryan, Assistant County Registrar, attended in the Town Hall, Edenderry, and, acting as Deputy Sheriff, auctioned the furniture and effects.

Chairs, tables and presses were sold and brought £30. The principal item was the seating (tip-up chairs) in the cinema, which brought £20.

Interest was centred in the billiard table. Mr. E. J. R. O'Brien, however, on behalf of the executors of the original Town Hall trustees, claimed the table, accessories and clock, the sale of which was not continued. The chief purchaser was Mr. Michael Nolan, Edenderry, who was stated to be acting for the Town Commissioners.

THE SENATE PANEL BILL

LABOUR'S PLAN FOR ELECTION

FIFTY-SIX AMENDMENTS RECEIVED

BY OUR POLITICAL CORRESPONDENT.

AMENDMENTS for the Committee stage of the Seanad Electoral (Panel Members) Bill are now being received at the Dail offices at Leinster House. Those received up to yesterday afternoon included fifty from Mr. W. Norton (leader of the Labour Party) and six from Mr. H. M. Dockrell (F.G., Dublin County).

Mr. Dockrell proposes to increase the number of persons to be elected on the industrial and commercial panel from nine, as mentioned in the bill, to eleven, and to reduce the administrative panel from seven to five. He proposes to alter the section which deals with the right of deputies to nominate to read that "any person may be nominated to the administrative panel by not less than 25 deputies, and that no deputy shall join in the nomination of more than one person." Also, "that every elector shall receive not more than one ballot paper."

NOMINATIONS

They propose that the panels should be appear to suggest that every two members of the Dail should be empowered to make a nomination; that nominations may be made for any panel up to a maximum of 69. When these nominations are made a committee would be set up by the Dail consisting of 21 members, elected on a proportional representation basis, with the Speaker as Chairman. This committee would examine the credentials of the persons nominated and have power to decide whether a person is qualified, and to transfer him or her to another panel for which, in their opinion, such person was better qualified.

NEW PANELS

They propose that the panels should be the same as in the bill, with the exception that instead of seven on the administrative panel, there should be five, and on the industrial panel 11 instead of 9. The panels, according to this plan would then be—Labour 11, Agriculture 11, Industry and Commerce 11, Administrative 5 and Culture, etc., 5. This would give the number as 43 to be elected to the new Senate. If the whole 69 selected for the panels were found by the committee to be eligible, they would then go to the Dail for election. But if a smaller number than 69 were found eligible, the Dail should be asked to supply the difference.

The amendments, it is understood, embody the views of the Labour Party for a permanent Senate.

PRETENDER TO FRENCH THRONE

"RESTORE MONARCHY" MANIFESTO

The Duc de Guise, Pretender to the French Throne, issued a manifesto "to all Frenchmen" yesterday, says Reuter. "There is only one solution for you," it said: "Restore the Monarchy."

Paris interest in the manifesto is centred on the fact that some quarters profess to find a link between the French Monarchists and the Cagoulards (the "Hooded Men"), held responsible for the arsenals which have been found in Paris and other centres in France.

Speculation is rife, too, following the news that the Pretender's son, the Comte de Paris, has gone to Switzerland.

"The situation at home and abroad," the manifesto states, "is grave. Your confused situation will force you to turn to a dictatorship of the Right or Left."

Proceeding to condemn the French parliamentary system and dictatorships, the manifesto adds:—

"In the case of the former, irresponsibility and instability render widespread reforms and lasting recovery impossible. Your legitimate claims will find satisfaction only in a monarchy."

"I am determined," the Duke declares, "to re-conquer the throne of my fathers. France will then resume her mission in the world. She will find peace, concord and prosperity."

The Comte de Paris has apparently not been expelled from Switzerland, and he is receiving a number of his political friends at Geneva.

AZORES EARTHQUAKE

FROM REUTER'S CORRESPONDENT.

PONTA DELGADA (AZORES), Monday.

News has just been received that a serious earthquake shook the Island of Santa Maria, in the Azores, at 6.31 yesterday evening. Many houses are reported to have been destroyed. Santa Maria is south of Ponta Delgada.

FRANCE'S "HOODED MEN"

POLICE ACTIVITY

FROM REUTER'S CORRESPONDENT.

PARIS, Monday.

A large arms dépôt at Toulouse is suspected by the police, who are making further inquiries to-day into the "hooded men" affair, which has caused a sensation in France.

They are stated to be virtually certain that a large section of the organisation, consisting of members of disbanded associations under the command of a retired army officer, exists there.

According to Le Jour, motorists arriving in or leaving Paris last night were being stopped and searched by mobile guards. At the military aerodromes pilots were ordered to remain in barracks.

Volle, the mason who was detained at Villemomble on suspicion of connection with the affair, has now been arrested. His wife is being kept under supervision.

An Italian and a Spaniard suspected of being involved and of having relations with insurgent Spain have had their papers removed by the authorities, preventing them from moving during the police investigations.

NEW ARMS DUMP FOUND

It was announced last night that a large store of arms had been found at Toulouse, where police inquiries were directed following indications that an organisation connected with the mysterious Cagoulards was operating in this district, says a Reuter Paris telegram.

"A FOUL AND CRUEL LIBEL"

LORD JUSTICE'S COMMENT

DUKE OF WINDSOR SUES PUBLISHERS

DAMAGES TO GO TO CHARITIES

"THE libel was a foul and cruel one," said Lord Hewart, the Lord Chief Justice, in the King's Bench Division, London, yesterday, in consenting, "reluctantly and with some hesitation," to the withdrawal of the action, "Windsor against William Heinemann, Ltd., and another."

A jury might have thought, he said, that it appeared to invite a thoroughly efficient horsewhipping.

Sir William Jowitt, K.C. (for the Duke of Windsor) announced that the defendants would pay a substantial sum by way of damages and costs, and the Duke would divide the sum among charities in which, as Prince of Wales or King, he took deep interest. The action, which was against William Heinemann, Ltd., publishers, and Geoffrey Dennis, author, of "Coronation Commentary," was for libel contained in that book.

Sir William said that the book alleged that the Duchess of Windsor had been the Duke's mistress before his marriage; that the Duke at times had recourse to "other sources of courage," and that the real cause of the abdication was the desire of Ministers to get rid of the Duke for other misdeeds.

He said that no writer dealing with the abdication could protect himself by the mere assertion that such rumours had existed before his book was published. He was not entitled to publish such rumours.

DEFAMATORY

Mr. Dennis was a distinguished author, and this made the repetition of rumours by him more serious. The chapter entitled "Abdication" was written without due consideration, and it contained such defamatory and utterly groundless allegations that the Duke had to take action to show that such statements could not be made with impunity. The defendants had not attempted to justify any of the assertions. There was no foundation for saying that his judgment was influenced by drink.

The book spoke of "things left undone . . . . duty neglected. . . . papers held up. . . . papers curiously and Kaiserishly annotated. . . . muddling . . . fuddling. . . . meddling."

"Mere idle gossip," commented Sir William.

Another false statement was that at the last moment the Duke threw over Aberdeen authorities when he had arranged to open an infirmary, and drove to the station to meet the woman he later married.

The truth was that the King had decided that during the whole period of Court mourning he would not undertake any opening ceremonies.

A suggestion that Edward himself prolonged the crisis, holding out for more money, was described by the book as "base."

Lord Hewart—Why publish it?

INSULTING TO DUCHESS

Sir William said that it was a "calumnious insinuation." The true facts of the abdication were that Edward desired a marriage against which his Ministers advised him. As a constitutional monarch he could not disregard that advice; as a man he could not well support the responsibilities of his office unless he married the woman of his choice. He decided to abdicate, knowing that the responsibilities would be placed on shoulders well able to bear them.

Referring to a rumour, repeated in the book, that the Duchess before her marriage was the Duke's mistress, Sir William said: "No suggestion could be more damaging or more insulting to the lady who is now the Duchess of Windsor."

The suggestion could not be supported by a shred of evidence.

Speaking of the course the Duke had taken in regard to the libel, Sir William said that he would not take a similar course in future over such a libel, whatever the circumstances might be.

Mr. Valentine Holmes, for William Heinemann, Ltd., made "a sincere and humble apology to the Duke." He wished that the whole chapter could be read to show that neither the publishers nor the author had lent authority to the rumours.

Lord Hewart—But they may have repeated them.

BOOK WITHDRAWN

Mr. Holmes said that they did not wish to excuse their error in giving further circulation to unfounded rumours even in circumstances which were intended to discredit and discount them. It was never intended that the rumours should be taken as facts. The book had been withdrawn from circulation.

Mr. John Morris, for Mr. Geoffrey Dennis, also expressed "sincere regret for the pain he had caused." The book, he said, was intended as an historical treatise upon the monarchial system.

He realised that he had made a great mistake, although his intention had been not to give currency to the rumours, but "as a humble admirer to discredit them."

Lord Hewart, consenting to the record being withdrawn, said that the writing and publication of a libel might be a crime because it was calculated to provoke a breach of the peace.

SALARY INCREASES ATTACKED

MEMBERS LEAVE COUNCIL MEETING

FROM OUR CORRESPONDENT

MONAGHAN, Monday.

The Fianna Fail members walked out of Monaghan County Council meeting in a body to-day when Mr. P. Conlon, after a long speech, which was frequently interrupted, was moving a resolution condemning the attitude of the Government in increasing Ministers' salaries, creating a President of Eire at £15,000 a year, and condemning the Commission for recommending such salaries.

Mr. Conlon said that the cry of £1,000 a year being enough for any man had been forgotten. It was shocking to think of such increases when the people could not pay; when in one part of the country "grippers" were seizing for rates and taxes, and in another part "flying squads" were seizing for annuities. The President of the U.S.A. and the Prime Minister of Britain had not the salary they proposed to give this "King of Eire."

Mr. James Jack (F.F.) tried to be heard, but failed, the noise being so great. He banged the table, and shouted to the chairman: "Are you going to vote or not? This is political."

The chairman told Mr. Conlon that his time for speaking was up, but he continued speaking. All the Fianna Fail members then rose and left the room.

The chairman said that they could not go on without a quorum. The Council then adjourned.

MR. LEMASS IN CORK

A WARNING TO INDUSTRIALISTS

IRISH WARES MUST BE GOOD AND CHEAP

WILL BROOK NO DELAY OR DESTRUCTION

CORK, Monday.

THE greatest danger to the present industrial revival comes from a minority of manufacturers, who are cashing in to an undue extent upon protection.

This was the opinion expressed by Mr. Sean Lemass, Minister for Industry and Commerce, when he opened Aonach na Nodlag here to-night. The Minister, who was welcomed by the Lord Mayor (Mr. J. Hickey) and the Town Clerk (Mr. C. Harrington), said that it was very desirable that such exhibitions of Irish goods should be held regularly.

"We have many grounds for justifiable pride," continued the Minister, "even if we have also some grounds for criticism." He deprecated an undue tendency to self-criticism as an inferiority complex bred of centuries of slavery, which prompted people to believe, even against all evidence, that foreign products must be better than their own. That slave mentality was dying, but dying hard, and dying with occasional spasms of strength, one of which the nation is, he thought, at present experiencing. It was, of course, not to be disputed that we in Ireland had much to learn in the industrial sphere. "Some of the defects of industrial management are due to a certain hesitation to accept the present industrial development as permanent," he said, "but these fears are, I think, unfounded, and will be recognised to be baseless by anyone who studies our national position.

THE ONE DANGER

"The one thing that may produce a public reaction against the idea of developing our native industrial resources is any failure on the part of our industrialists to give the public a fair deal. It must be the ideal of our manufacturers to produce articles as good and as cheap as any that can be imported. There is no reason whatever why Irish goods cannot be as good in every way as imported goods. In almost every case Irish manufacturers are using the same machinery as manufacturers abroad; they use similar raw materials, and their workers are not less intelligent and capable of learning than others. The failure to produce goods of an equal quality to those from abroad can be due only to managerial inability to make use of these resources. Furthermore, manufacturers must endeavour to produce these goods as cheaply as similar goods are available in other countries. Wherever prices are higher the burden of proof that such high prices are due to causes outside their control rests upon them."

A MINORITY

The greatest danger to the Irish industrial revival does not come at present from its avowed enemies or from those who have vested interests in the importation and distribution, or in the advertising, of foreign goods. It comes from a minority of manufacturers who are cashing in to an undue extent upon the protection and assistance given by the State. These people may hope for a reaction which will destroy, not merely their own, but other better managed concerns as well.

"As one who believes that industrial development is essential to our well-being as a nation, if not to its very existence, and who is determined that anything which may delay or destroy that development must be removed, I am prepared to face even an apparent set-back to our industrial progress rather than see development on the wrong lines. I know that the majority of our Irish industrialists will support that attitude. In one or more directions we may, perhaps, have made a false start, and it may be necessary to clear the ground and start again, but by judicious pruning we will enable the whole tree of Irish industrial organisation to grow strong and tall.

EXCESSIVE PROFIT

"In the pursuit of such a policy the holding of an Aonach like this will be of great assistance. Here the public have the opportunity of seeing Irish goods displayed in a suitable atmosphere and in a friendly atmosphere, and it is well for the public to remember that the atmosphere of many of our retail establishments is not altogether friendly to the industrial revival. In many of these establishments it is commonplace to explain bad buying, inadequate stocks, and their own excessive profits by attributing the blame to the manufacturers. Here, however, visitors will meet with no such tendency. I urge the public of Cork to avail themselves of it for making their Christmas purchases."

In conclusion he thanked the Lord Mayor for his welcome, and said that he agreed that Cork had not got the recognition it deserves. If, however, the holding of the Aonach helped to secure that recognition, then the members of the committee who organised it so efficiently would have reason to be pleased with their efforts.

In welcoming the Minister, the Lord Mayor said that Cork was deserving of more recognition in the way of new industries, and he was hopeful that as a result of the Minister's visit they would get news from him in the very near future. Nowhere in the country was the Minister likely to get more co-operation in the development of the country than in Cork.

A vote of thanks to Mr. Lemass was carried on the motion of Mrs. S. Fitzgerald, seconded by Mrs. Lynch, and supported by Mr. J. C. Dowdall.

FAR EASTERN CONFERENCE

TALKS AGAIN ADJOURNED

DELEGATES TO CONSULT GOVERNMENTS

FROM REUTER'S CORRESPONDENT.

BRUSSELS, Monday.

AFTER a private meeting to consider the draft report, on which the British and American delegations were working until the early hours of this morning, the Far Eastern Conference this evening adjourned until 3 p.m. on Wednesday.

The feature of to-day's meeting was a moving speech by China's delegate, Dr. Wellington Koo. He strongly criticised the report, made an urgent appeal for aid, and reserved the right to suggest amendments of the report.

It is to be feared, however, that Dr. Koo's words fell on deaf ears. As a French delegate remarked: "He is incontrovertible, but what can we do?"

Great precautions were taken to keep the report secret. The report is divided into two parts—the first historical, the second a declaration by the Conference as a whole. The historical portion is a straightforward record of events leading up to the Brussels Conference; the second part consists of thirteen Articles. These emphasise that international instruments constitute a framework to safeguard security and peace.

They go on to insist that the Chinese military operations are purely defensive, and that no solution forcibly imposed by one nation upon another can constitute a just and lasting settlement.

The declaration further insists that any settlement must take account of the various interests concerned. It repudiates the suggestion of direct negotiations, and insists on the desirability of a prompt suspension of hostilities.

In conclusion, it decided to suspend the Conference to allow time for an exchange of views and to explore methods of bringing about a peaceful settlement, but this suspension does not imply any diminution of interest by the Powers in the Far East. It finally provides that the meeting can be convened once again by the Chairman or any two members.

The meeting this afternoon adjourned till Wednesday to enable delegates to consult their Governments and to submit amendments. On Wednesday it is probable that there will be two sittings in order to complete the discussion and enable the Conference to adjourn.

NORTH DUBLIN CORONER

APPOINTMENT AGAIN POSTPONED

Dublin County Council, at a special meeting last night, decided to postpone again the appointment of a temporary coroner for North County Dublin until the salary previously fixed is revised.

At its last meeting the Council decided to pay the temporary coroner a salary equal to £200 a year. At yesterday's meeting a letter was received from the Department of Local Government and Public Health, pointing out that in 1936 only seven inquests had been held in North County Dublin.

The letter stated that in 1932 the late Dr. Walters held 22 inquests, in 1933 18, in 1934 23, in 1935 11, and in 1936 7. In South County Dublin 64 inquests were held in 1932, 53 in 1933, 58 in 1934, 51 in 1935, and and 79 in 1936. The Minister was of opinion that one coroner would be sufficient for County Dublin, and with this view the Minister for Justice concurred. The Minister asked the Council to submit a scheme for the amalgamation of the two coronerships.

The Chairman (Mr. P. Belton) said that when they were considering the appointment of a temporary coroner they were not aware of the information contained in the Minister's letter. In view of that information and in view of the Law Agent's advice that they could not at that meeting appoint a temporary coroner at a reduced salary, he suggested that they should refer the matter to a further meeting.

This was agreed to.

IRISH FILM STAR'S VISIT

MAUREEN O'SULLIVAN AT HOME

A crowd of two hundred rain-drenched people—the majority women—waited at Dun Laoghaire yesterday evening to see Miss Maureen O'Sullivan, the pretty Irish film actress, and her author husband, Mr. John Farrow, land from the L.M.S. mail boat.

Every one of the two hundred, and about fifty more yelling children who had gathered outside the pier barrier, did see Maureen, for she must be one of the most unspoilt and delightfully natural of film celebrities. When the pushing, jostling autograph-seeking crowd temporarily separated her from her husband and her father, Major Charles J. O'Sullivan, who had come to meet her, she just grinned, and obviously enjoyed it all. She shook hands with some of the people in the crowd, chatted with others, answered questions shot at her from all quarters, and signed her name—in books, on the backs of envelopes, and on scraps of paper. In fact, she wore a look as if she would be genuinely disappointed if one of the autograph-hunters was overlooked.

Later, united with her husband and father—and accompanied by a couple of burly Civic Guards—Miss O'Sullivan reached her father's car, where she sat for several minutes signing more autographs before it drove off amid a rousing cheer.

On board the boat Miss O'Sullivan told an Irish Times reporter that her visit would of necessity be brief. Her latest picture, "A Yank at Oxford," in which she is co-starred with Robert Taylor, is to be previewed—perhaps next week—and she would have to return for it. She and her husband were staying at her father's home in Killiney.

Mr. Farrow, who visited Ireland three years ago, said that he would have to leave for America, probably next week. He and his wife had made no plans for their visit to Ireland.

The last film which Miss O'Sullivan made in America, "The Emperor's Candlesticks," will shortly be shown at the Savoy Cinema. In it she appears with William Powell, Robert Young and Luise Rainer, Academy Award winner. The story, from a novel by Baroness Orczy, moves from Vienna to Warsaw, into Russia and back into Paris and London, with suspenseful action at every step. It is the story of two spies who act for opposition forces and yet fall in love during a hectic chase across Europe.

BRAZILIAN BONDS DEFAULT

MR. EDEN ON INVESTORS' POSITION

In the House of Commons yesterday, Sir Nicholas Grattan-Doyle (Conservative) asked the Foreign Secretary whether he would reconsider his decision not to take action to protect British holders of Brazilian securities until requested to do so by the Council of Foreign Bondholders.

Mr. Eden said that as a result of representations made to the Brazilian Government it was hoped that no action would be taken by Brazil pending negotiations with foreign bondholders. Unfortunately, the latest information indicated that a definite decision had been made to suspend payment pending the conclusion of a new agreement. The Government had the new situation under serious consideration. The Corporation of Foreign Bondholders was not a self-constituted body, and represented investors and not the issuing houses.

OBITUARY

MR. PHILIP DE LASZLO

Mr. Philip Alexius László de Lombos (better known as Philip de László), the distinguished portrait painter, died last night at his residence, 3 Fitzjohn's avenue, Hampstead, London, aged sixty-eight. In Budapest, where he was born, he won, as a mere boy of nine, a scholarship at the Industrial Art School and National Drawing School, and then began that rapid progress in his art which was to place him at an early age among the leading portrait painters of a continent. From Budapest he went to Munich, and worked under Liezinmayer, and thence to Paris, where he studied under such great Masters as Lefebre and Benjamin Constant.

De László was in his teens when he set out upon his conquest of Europe. He passed from country to country, painting crowned heads, statesmen and beauties of society. It has been said with truth that he had painted more royal sitters than any other artist of his time. It must be added that the royal sitters in their turn contrived to make him one of the most liberally decorated men in Christendom. The Emperor of Austria and King of Hungary ennobled him; in England he was created M.V.O.; his Continental honours would require a catalogue.

De László was awarded the gold medal of the Paris Salon for his portrait of Prince Hohenlohe in 1899, and in the following year his portrait of Pope Leo XIII. obtained a like award. Among his many sitters were King Edward VII., Queen Alexandra, President Harding, President Roosevelt, the former Emperor of Germany and Signor Mussolini. The Archbishop of Canterbury once said that de László was "almost the official painter of the Church of England in the twentieth century." He possessed both the perfection and fertility of genius. In 1935 he had completed his two thousandth portrait. His works hold honoured places in the leading picture galleries of the world. Our own collection in the Municipal Gallery of Modern Art has been enriched by more than one example that commands attention, and gives lasting pleasure to the onlooker.

Philip de Laszlo was an unsparing critic of the "modern" in art. "Leave the word 'modern' to the dressmakers," he said. "The artist should not be a follower of fashion. Don't abandon taste for modernity or gentility for jazz."

Mr. de László had become a naturalised British subject, but during the war he was interned by order of the Home Secretary. In June, 1919, however, a Court of Inquiry, presided over by Mr. Justice Salter, found that "there had not been any conduct on the part of Mr. de László which would merit or justify the withdrawal from him of the British citizenship he enjoyed." Among the witnesses heard were Mr. (afterwards Sir) Austen Chamberlain, and Sir John Lavery, while the present Chancellor of the Exchequer (Sir John Simon) conducted the defence.

Mr. de László married, in 1900, Lucy Madeleine, daughter of the late Mr. H. Guinness, of Burton Hall, Stillorgan, Co. Dublin.

MAJOR E. J. M. W. HARVEY

The death occurred yesterday, at Wood Green, Hampshire, of Major Edward John More Wood Harvey, late Royal Warwickshire Regiment, elder son of the late Colonel Edward Harvey, Royal Engineers, and nephew of the late Mr. J. G. N. Harvey, Derry.

MURDER OF BISHOP AND MISSIONARIES

CHINESE BANDITS AT LARGE

FROM REUTER'S CORRESPONDENT.

AMSTERDAM, Monday.

A Dutch bishop, Mgr. Schraven, and seven Catholic missionaries, including two Dutchmen and two Frenchmen, were kidnapped and murdered by Chinese bandits at Chengtingfu on October 8th, according to official information just received by the victims' families.

The murders are believed to have followed a slackening of the Central Government's influence, which is stated to have resulted in groups of Chinese soldiers forming irregular bands.

LINEN GUILD BRIDGE DRIVE

The annual bridge drive in aid of the Linen Guild of the Orthopædic Hospital, 22 Upper Merrion street, will be held in the hospital next Thursday evening. This very popular function has always been well attended by many noted bridge players. Numerous valuable prizes have been presented, and a thoroughly enjoyable evening is anticipated.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

"ULSTER"

TO THE EDITOR OF THE IRISH TIMES.

SIR,—Your correspondent, Captain Hamilton, of Brownhall, draws attention to one of the many points on which Northern and Southern Ireland prove themselves "sisters under their skin." Sir A. Babington suggests that the six counties of "Northern Ireland" should be called "Ulster," though the name formerly connoted Cavan, Donegal and Monaghan as well.

This is a gesture of sympathy and understanding with Mr. De Valera, who has just given "Ireland" a new Constitution by a margin so narrow, that if the six counties aforesaid had voted on the issue at the plebiscite, the measure would have stood little chance of getting through.

Anything that calls attention to the essential "sameness and oneness" of Irishmen is a help towards bringing nearer the day when an acceptable solution will be found to conclude our Island story.—Yours, etc.,

C. HOLMES DENHAM.

THE ABBEY THEATRE

TO THE EDITOR OF THE IRISH TIMES.

SIR,—Some little time ago the Abbey Theatre announced a new policy. There was an animated correspondence in the Press, and fears were expressed by many lest the distinctively Irish character of the theatre might be lost. After the time which has elapsed, it is legitimate to inquire what has been the result of the change of policy then announced.

An old playgoer revisiting the theatre would probably be struck first of all by the altered manner of production. The footlights have been extinguished, and a system of lighting adopted which, in aiming at effects, too often results in obscurity. Actors have a disconcerting trick of taking a step and suddenly disappearing into the shadows. Occasional "stunts" occur, such as the newsboys in the aisles of the auditorium in a recent production, which would have been unthought of under the old management. The productions, too, tend to be on a much more lavish scale. In "Coriolanus," as recently in "The Man in a Cloak," one felt that "no expense had been spared." Whether the piece in either case merited the expenditure is another matter.

It may be imagination, but one seems to notice a difference in the acting. It is less quiet, less natural. In a recent production some of the actors were almost strident. Then the "guest artist" has made his appearance. No doubt his presence may be justified on the ground that there is no regular member of the company competent to perform a particular part, but it is at least arguable that it weakens the morale and team work of a repertory company.

These are a few of the observations which might strike one who had not visited the theatre for some time. The general impression left on his mind might be that the trend of the Abbey is away from that naturalistic style which we have come to associate with it, and in which the emphasis is upon the actor, and towards that producer's theatre which the genius of Mr. Hilton Edwards has made so popular at the Gate. Whether, if this is so, it is a good or bad thing is, of course, a matter of taste, but it is permissible to suggest that in time it must have an effect upon that wonderful natural acting and team work, which have fascinated and baffled critics all over the world.

In one respect, however, the fears of your correspondents when the change was announced have not been realised. The stage has not been flooded with a spate of continental masterpieces. Instead the theatre has confined itself to the work of local dramatists, often of a rather inferior vintage.—Yours, etc.,

"PLAYGOER."

THE ADVERSE BALANCE

TO THE EDITOR OF THE IRISH TIMES.

SIR,—The very remarkable statement made by Mr. H. Flinn, T.D., in the Dail on the 17th inst., as reported in the Press, with reference to the adverse trade balance deserves special attention. Here it is:—"The exports of a country were the payments that a country makes. Its imports were its income, and a country that permanently had a favourable trade balance undoubtedly was a country which was going bankrupt, because it would mean that every year that country was sending out more goods than it received money for." Has he been misreported? If not, it may be pointed out that every country in the world without exception, aims at having a favourable trade balance. Is Mr H. Flinn right and everyone else in the world wrong?—Yours, etc.,

E. A. HACKETT.

THE GAIETY THEATRE

AN UNUSUAL CRIME PLAY

"The Amazing Dr. Clitterhouse" is a play of a distinctly metropolitan type, to be regarded as entertainment and discussed as such, without any regard to academic theatrical criticism. As entertainment it is first class, full of smart lines, laughs and thrills, capable of being followed and understood without a headache or a heartache.

All too seldom is Dublin offered such fare, and the big crowd at the Gaiety last night showed that it is appreciated. It may be judicious, however, to point out that it is neither a musical comedy nor a revue, and the people arriving ten minutes after the action has started are definitely a nuisance.

Dr. Clitterhouse becomes interested in the pathological study of crime, and in order to obtain material for a book which he is writing on the subject he commits a number of robberies, becomes involved with a gang of "crooks," and eventually, when he wants to retire from the pursuit of material and get on with the writing of the book, he has to commit the last serious crime in an effort to extricate himself.

The play is by Mr. Barré Lyndon, who also, strange to say, is a writer of some note upon the subject of motor racing. There are no motors in this play, apart from a lorry in which the "swag" is removed from the scene of the gang's most ambitious operation—the robbing of a fur warehouse, from which £200,000 worth of skins is taken.

GOOD ACTING

Godfrey Tearle who takes the part of Dr. Clitterhouse, is an actor with a London reputation extending over the best part of two decades. He is amusing and entertaining in the part of the doctor, and if at times he seems to be taking his crime rather lightheartedly, the last act may explain why that should be so. Lionel Gadaden was a realistic and distasteful "fence," the villain of the piece. Leslie Dwyer, as "Oakie," was a most attractive sort of burglar, and Robert Wilton, as "Pal" Green, with his unvarying toast, "Rot 'em," also was very engaging. The two women parts, Barbara Palmer as Nurse Ann and Mary Grahan as Daisy, called for some of the most dramatic acting in the piece, and they both were splendid. Most of the other parts were small in comparison, but they were most capably played. The cockney slang of the various "crooks" in itself whs a treat, and the mixture of humour and drama in their reactions before, during and after the big crime made the play thoroughly entertaining

THE GATE THEATRE

SECOND WEEK OF "RICHARD OF BORDEAUX"

"Richard of Bordeaux," Gordon Daviot's play, is being continued at the Gate Theatre, Dublin, for a second week. The play proved such a success last week that it was not surprising to find a big crowd present last night, and, if indications suggest anything, there will not be many seats vacant during the remainder of the week. It is a work in which Micheal MacLiammoir comes out at his best as the youthful Richard, and he has a rare partner in Meriel Moore as Anne of Bohemia, his Queen. They are supported by an excellent team, and the settings and dresses are of a grandeur that equals anything that the Gate has hitherto achieved.

With such an interesting play, such a team of players, and such superb staging, "Richard of Bordeaux" looks as if it will be one of the biggest successes of the season.

OUR VETERAN NATURALIST

TESTIMONIAL TO MR. C. B. MOFFAT

AUTHOR OF MANY WORKS ON FAUNA

THE following letter has been issued:—

"The friends of Mr. C. B. Moffat feel that some tangible recognition of his work in the cause of natural history in Ireland should be made. He has devoted his life to nature study, and his observations are embodied in numerous scientific journals.

"His reputation as an authority is world-wide. A zealous champion, he has upheld in the Press the claims of our birds and other wild creatures to protection, instead of destruction, by man, and has refuted with scientific data and clear logic the opinions and statements of the uninformed.

"For many years he has held office in the Dublin Naturalists' Field Club, of which he has been a leading member for thirty-five years. In the Irish Society for the Protection of Birds he has been, and still is, the moving spirit, giving to its work a genius and devotion, the value of which is beyond all praise and impossible to estimate. He is largely responsible for the Wild Birds Protection Act, 1930, which gave much-needed protection to our Irish birds.

"The more enlightened attitude of the general public towards our feathered friends is probably more due to him than to the work of any other individual in Ireland. He is an active and most useful member of the Council of the Royal Zoological Society of Ireland, which maintains our Dublin Zoo. A member of the Flora and Fauna Committee of the Royal Irish Academy, he has just completed a list of Irish mammals, which will be published by the Academy. It is safe to say that no other individual was so competent to undertake this work.

RECOGNITION

"It is felt that the time is now appropriate to signify the appreciation of all nature lovers and scientific people to the great contribution which Mr. Moffat has made to the cultural life of Ireland throughout so many years.

"As it is desired that the response to this invitation to join the testimonial should be as widespread as possible, a small committee representative of various interests has been formed for the purpose of receiving subscriptions, large or small, which may be sent to the hon. treasurer or to any other member of the committee.

"C. W. ALLEN, 4 Castlewood avenue, Rathmines. Hon. Secretary, Dublin Naturalists' Field Club.

"S. L. BROWN, K.C., 63 Merrion square, Dublin. Vice-President, the Irish Society for Protection of Birds.

"P. E. DUNN, 2 Clare street, Dublin. Member of Council, Royal Zoological Society of Ireland.

"A FARRINGTON, Resident Secretary, Royal Irish Academy, 19 Dawson street, Dublin.

"LORD HOLMPATRICK, Abbotstown, Castleknock, Co. Dublin. President, Royal Zoological Society of Ireland.

"THE VERY REV. P. G. KENNEDY, S.J., Rathfarnham Castle, Co. Dublin. Member of Committee of the Irish Society for the Protection of Birds.

"T. H. MASON, Hon. Treasurer, 39 Kenilworth square, Rathgar. Past President, Dublin Naturalists' Field Club.

"DR. R. LLOYD PRAEGER, 19 Fitzwilliam square, Dublin. Past President, Royal Irish Academy."

AN APPRECIATION

BY DR. ROBERT LLOYD PRAEGER

Our veteran Irish naturalist, C. B. Moffat, has placed all those who are interested in our larger wild creatures under a new debt of gratitude by compiling a full account of the native or naturalised Irish mammals, from deer and bats to whales, seals and mice. This will be published shortly by the Royal Irish Academy. Such a compilation is by no means an easy task, on account of the doubt and obscurity which surrounds the occurrence of even some of our larger animals. The wild cat, for instance, is by some awarded, and by others denied, a place in our fauna. There is the question whether the true wild boar existed in Ireland within historic times, or merely wild pigs. There are the Irish stoat and the Irish hare, now known to be different from those inhabiting England and Scotland. And so on. Mr. Moffat's treatise will give full and up-to-date information on these and other interesting zoological problems, the evidence dealing with which is widely scattered and difficult to obtain.

It is half a century now since Mr. Moffat began to write the long series of articles and notes on Irish zoology—and botany as well—published chiefly in local journals, which have so greatly advanced our knowledge of Irish animals of many kinds. Birds and bats, butterflies, ants, wasps and what-not have come under his scrutiny and an unusual insight and sagacity in things scientific have combined to give a peculiar interest and charm to his writings on all kinds of natural history problems. For instance, he has put forward a novel explanation to account for the failure of our common vigorous birds to increase in numbers, as might reasonably be expected. This has usually been put down to heavy mortality during the early part of their lives; but Moffat's theory, which has attracted wide attention, attributes it to the fact that each male regards a certain amount of territory as his own, and drives away other birds which wish to nest in it; and since all suitable ground is already thus occupied, the "homeless" birds fail to mate and to produce families.

BIRD PROTECTION

For many years Ireland has owed a heavy debt of gratitude to Mr. Moffat for his ceaseless and successful efforts in connection with the protection of wild birds. Egg-collecting and promiscuous shooting, if unchecked, tend to decimate, or even to exterminate, our rarer or more beautiful species, particularly those which dare to interfere in any way with animals which have value for purposes of sport, whether these be fishes or four-footed creatures. There is much misconception as to the rôle which birds play in this respect, and many—such as owls and most of the hawks—do much more good by the destruction of vermin than they do harm by taking young fish or eggs or nestlings. He has unswervingly for many years upheld the claims of such birds and other wild creatures to protection, instead of destruction, by man, and has refuted with scientific data and clear logic the opinions and statements of the uninformed. He is largely responsible for the Wild Birds Protection Act, passed in 1930—a noble monument to his disinterested effort on behalf of those feathered friends that add so much that is beautiful and interesting to the countryside.

A STATUE OF LORD CRAIGAVON

ULSTER COUNCIL PROJECT

FROM OUR CORRESPONDENT.

BELFAST, Monday.

A movement is on foot to erect a statue of Viscount Craigavon, Prime Minister of Northern Ireland. It has the backing of the Ulster Unionist Council, and the Marquis of Londonderry is chairman of the committee which has the matter in hand. Captain Dixon, M.P., is honorary treasurer.

The commission to construct the statue has been placed with Mr. Leonard S. Merrifield, who constructed the statue of Lord Carson which forms a striking feature at the entrance to the Parliament Buildings at Stormont.

NEW ABBEY THEATRE PLAY

"COGGERERS"

The Abbey Theatre Company presented for the first time last night a new play by Mr. Paul Vincent Carroll, entitled "Coggerers."

The title of the play may be a little puzzling to a Dublin audience, but it is fully explained as the dialogue proceeds. There is little or no action in the single act, so that the development depends entirely upon the words.

The "Coggerers" of the little sketch are the famous "dead who died for Ireland," whose alleged example is supposed to influence the lives of succeeding generations. The scene is set in the entrance hall of a public library in Dublin on the morning of Easter Monday, 1916. The hall is adorned with an assemblage of busts, including those of Emmet, Wolfe Tone, Lord Edward Fitzgerald, John Mitchel and Parnell; the statue of O'Connell was apparently of life size, because American visitors had chipped off his fingers and toes, and it had to go away for repairs. The "new barbarians" had been unloosed.

The statues banter the charwoman, who revels in the unfamiliar name of Mrs. Galgoogley, and induce her to sing a song, in which Dublin receives a few hard knocks. The lady has a son, Owen, who is the apple of her eye, but he is introduced in terms which suggest that he is a blood relation of O'Casey's Paycock. It seems, however, that Owen is in "the movement," having heard the voices of the "coggerers." He listened to such effect that he received a mortal wound, which brings him to death on O'Connell's pedestal.

Short as the little play is, the author is not clear about its meaning. He opens with words suggestive of satire, and concludes by welcoming Owen into the ranks of the immortals. There is small scope for acting in a group of statues, but the living people were capably impersonated by Miss Josephine Fitzgerald, Mr. Eric Gorman and Mr. W. T. O'Connor.

"Coggerers" was followed by Synge's "The Playboy of the Western World," with Mr. Cyril Cusack as Christy Mahon, Mr. Fred Johnson as Michael James, Ann Clery as "Pegeen Mike," Eric Gorman as Shawn Keogh, and W. O'Gorman as Old Mahon.

Both plays were excellently directed by Mr. Hugh Hunt, with stage settings by Miss Tanya Moiseiwitsch.

THEATRE ROYAL

A GOOD MEN'S CHOIR

To present a choir in an attractive manner on the vaudeville stage is not an easy matter, but Mr. Vincent Tilsley stage manages his Meistersingers very well, and this adds to the entertainment value of their performance. The choir is well drilled, and consists of men with pleasant voices. Right from their opening number, "Rise and Shine," their show goes over well, with such songs as "Timber," a special arrangement of "Shipmates of Mine," and "Day In, Day Out," which was written by a Dublin man. The individual vocalists are good, particularly the effortless soprano,

Miss Gwen May, who was at her best in "The First Music in May." Full marks were also earned by the two pianists—Charles Kelly and Ted Staves.

Ultra modern dancing appears to be a most complicated business to judge from the routines of Grace Draper and Alan Shires. Jack and June Melville have nothing very new in their juggling act, but they manage to get some comedy into it and raise the laugh which they deserve.

The Kemmys' presentation is graceful "strong arm" stuff. Although not appearing on the printed programme a team of dancers helps to brighten up the show.

Jimmy Campbell and the orchestra present a song scena, in costume, of gipsy melodies, in which Jack Cheadle, the solo violinist, was particularly good. At the organ Mr. Alban Chambers plays a selection of martial music.

OLYMPIA THEATRE

"PICK O' THE PACK"

The attraction for this week at the Olympia is furnished by a stage show entitled "The Pick of the Pack." The company is a numerous one and it gives unmistakable grounds for the amusement and pleasure of the audience.

The programme is packed with comedy, excellent music and dancing. A leading rôle is in the hands of Jack Radcliffe, a Scottish comedian, who makes the cooking of a meal a laughable mix-up. Bob Curnot and a number of young ladies give a good dancing exhibition. Other leading members of the company are Tom F. Moss, the Caruso of the hills; the Four Smith Brothers, the Dale Sisters, Jack, Helen and Bob, in "The Doctor's Dilemma."

The programme concludes with "Our Cabaret," with the young ladies in their acrobatic manias and the singing of the song "Why Should We Fight?" Mackenzie Reid and his friend Dorothy, Scotland's premier accordionists, played very pleasingly.

The stage scenery was very artistic and picturesque.

MINISTER CALLED TO ENGLAND

FROM OUR CORRESPONDENT.

BELFAST, Monday.

Sir Dawson Bates, the Northern Minister of Home Affairs, was summoned to London to-night to attend a conference on air raid precautions. He will thus be unable to attend the re-opening of Parliament at Stormont, where he was to have been Minister-in-Attendance on the Governor. His place will be taken by Major Shillington, Minister of Labour.

MRS. NOEL GUINNESS "AT HOME"

ENJOYABLE FUNCTION

Yesterday afternoon a most enjoyable "At Home" was given by Mrs. Noel Guinness and her daughter-in-law, Mrs. H. E. Guinness, at the art studio, 7 St. Stephen's Green, where Miss Mainie Jellett is holding her exhibition. It was a very representative social gathering, the guests including patrons of art, literature and the theatre.

Mrs. Noel Guinness wore a graceful gown of pastel blue georgette embroidered in silver, with a silver collar and black velvet hat. She received the guests, assisted by Mrs. H. E. Guinness, who wore a long black marocain dress, the full sleeves being inset with gold lame and crimson georgette, the same being used on the corsage. With this she wore a becoming small black beret and handsome pearls.

Those present included:—Dr. and Mrs. Boxwell, Mr., Mrs. and Miss Carroll, Mrs. Wisdom Hely, Mr. and Mrs. Mill, Miss Plunkett, Major and Mrs. Wardell, Dr. and Mrs. Fitzgibbon, Miss Crosbie, Colonel and the Hon. Mrs. Guinness, Major and Mrs. O. Guinness, Lady and Sir Basil Goulding, Colonel and Mrs. Cairnes, Mrs. and Mr. Maude, Captain and Mrs. Phibbs, Miss Trumbull, Canon and Mrs. Powell, Colonel and Mrs. Magan, Mr. and Mrs. F. B. Jameson, Mr. and Mrs. F. Jameson, Mr. and Mrs W. G. Jameson, Mr. and Mrs. L. Jameson, the Rev. P. and Mrs. Armstrong, Mr. and Mrs. Louis Smith, Sir F. and Lady Moore, Dr. and Mrs. Starkie, Mr. Cyril Dickinson, Mr. and Mrs. J. E. Walshe, Mr. and Mrs. H. Jellett, Mr. and Mrs. D. PIANOFORTE RECITALS

PETER STADLEN AT R.D.S., BALLSBRIDGE

The Recitals at the R.D.S., Ballsbridge, Dublin, yesterday, were given by Peter Stadlen, a young Austrian pianist, and pupil of Paul Wiengartner, who has been building up a big reputation on the Continent over the last few years. In his playing at both Recitals yesterday, he more than justified the laudatory criticisms that have been passed. That his pianistic knowledge is comprehensive was reflected in his programme, in which he selected compositions as far apart as Beethoven's Diabelli-Variations and Schonberg's Five Pieces for the Piano. In the Beethoven work, which was his opening contribution, he imparted wonderful life and colour to this most interesting composition. variations were very freely used by Beethoven—he left twenty-nine sets of variations for the pianoforte alone or with other solo instruments, and the form is also met with in his sonatas and symphonies. The Variations played yesterday were composed on a waltz theme to which Diabelli invited composers to send him a variation. Beethoven sent thirty-three and M. Stadlen brought out their varying moods with extraordinary understanding.

His playing impressed one from the outset for its great dynamic force, but it was no mere thrashing of the instrument. There were movements in which there was a delightful velvet touch, and the mood of the moment brought out in exquisite piano tones. As a technician alone, the player commanded respect—he showed superb control of the instrument, the fingering being perfect, the quality of tone always rich and warm, the phrasing and shaping artistic, and, above all, he made excellent use of the pedals. It was also a great test of memory to play the variations right through without the aid of score—a work that took almost fifty minutes—indeed the work seemed to be so very much at his fingers' tips that he was inclined to rush one variation into that succeeding; but this was a little shortcoming due to the impetuosity of youth—his wonderful vitality simply rushed him forward.

AFTERNOON RECITAL

At the afternoon recital there were, in contrast with the severely classical Beethoven, compositions by Schonberg and Prokofieff, two authors of the ultra modern school.

In Schonberg's Five Pieces for the Piano (Op. 23) one had a sample of expressionism—the aim of the composer being to intensify all means of expression.

Listening to the performance by this player, who showed an amazing grip of the requirements, one was forced to the conclusion that this new music was not intended for the enjoyment of the masses; that it depends on intuitive, not analytical thinking, and that in no respect must it conform with the accepted principles or conventions in music as most people understand them.

Indeed, that conviction was strengthened after listening at the night recital to a Sonata for the Piano, and Trois Mouvements de Petrouchka, by Stravinsky, who may be taken as one of the surrealist school in the new music. Whilst it was all in a language beyond ordinary human understanding, one was glad to hear it if only for the chance it gave M. Stadlen to reveal his virtuosity. Some of the effects he achieved were fascinating, especially in the last dance movement, "La semaine grasse."

This was all in strange contrast to the lovely lyrical melodies running through Schubert's Sonata in A Major (Op. 120), played with great restraint and delicacy. But the high light of the evening recital was the performance of the Twenty-four Preludes of Chopin. Again playing from memory, this amazing young player showed penetrating understanding of the different preludes. Impressions one took away were the graceful playing of the G major, with its rippling accompaniment, thoroughly French in spirit, which has been labelled "The Brook." Then that in E minor—a largo—which followed, so appealing in its sadness. Later there was the beautifully devotional lento of the thirteenth, and, by contrast, the bold and vigorous Prelude in B flat minor, and the final, so full of passion

Certainly this young man more than lived up to anticipations.

SALE OF ANTIQUES

NOTABLE COLLECTION OF PAINTINGS

In the auction galleries of Messrs Batterby and Co., 39 Westmoreland street, the sale will open at 12 noon to-day of the interesting collection of antique furniture, glass, old Irish and English silver, ivories, enamels, ornamental china, oil portraits and paintings, water-colours and wash and colour drawings by well-known artists.

The sale is at the instructions of the executors of the late Rev. Charles J. Brennan, P.P., Dromtariff Co. Kerry. Nearly 300 lots are to be offered, 100 of which appear in the picture collection. In this section leading artists of the Flemish, Dutch, Belgian, Spanish, Irish and English schools are represented. Among the works are "The Adoration of the Shepherds" (Murillo), "The Holy Family" (Paul Veronese), "The Holy Family in Garland of Flowers" (Daniel Siegers), "The Madonna and Child" (H. Bloemaert), "The Holy Family Resting" (Van Balen), panel painting (D. Teniers), "Ecce Homo" (Guido Reni).

A £66,450,000 SCHEME

COAL ROYALTIES BILL

LABOUR OPPOSITION'S CRITICISM

FROM OUR CORRESPONDENT.

WESTMINSTER, Monday.

MR. OLIVER STANLEY (President of the Board of Trade) to-day moved the second reading of the Coal Bill, which provides for the acquisition by the State of royalties and the placing of them under the control of a new Coal Commission, and also deals with amalgamations.

In the present bill, he said, the Government, while continuing part of the Act of 1930, sought to strengthen the position of the consumer. Under these schemes the chief safeguard of the consumer lay in the Committees of Investigation, which consisted of an independent chairman, with half the members representative of the consumers, one-quarter representative of the colliery owners, and one quarter representative of the mine owners. The Committees would, except in exceptional cases, take evidence in public. It was proposed to set up a Central Appeal Tribunal, to which appeals against the decision of the Committees of Investigation could be taken.

He suggested that there would be very little criticism of amalgamation if there was no question of compulsion. The case for compulsion was that if the interests of the public demanded that there should be no undue increase in price owing to any defects in the organisation of the industry. Parliament, through the Board of Trade, would preserve a hold on the general national policy adopted by the new Coal Commission, though in its day-to-day work, such as the granting of leases, it would be an independent body.

It was proposed that the royalties should be purchased for the sum of £66,450,000, that being the sum fixed by the Greene Tribunal. The method of purchase had been suggested by the royalty owners themselves—the fixing of a global sum for all rights and properties which were to be taken over, and leaving it until afterwards to determine the particular share of the owner in that particular sum. The new Commission would acquire the coal whether it was being worked or not, whether it was known or not, and all the ancillary rights of working attached to the coal. The purchase price did not include associated minerals, but the Commission could acquire them, but at a price additional to the global figure.

The transitional period would come to an end on 1st July, 1942, when all property would vest in the Commission. It was believed that by that time valuation would be sufficiently far advanced to pay the greater part, if not all, of the compensation. He urged the acceptance of the bill as a definite and important contribution to the stability and prosperity of the industry.

REJECTION MOVED

Mr. Arthur Greenwood (Labour) moved the rejection of the bill. He said that if this was the first example of the Government's anti-slump policy, he did not think much of it. For a century and a half landowners had extorted an annual tribute from those who produced the coal, which was the life-blood of British industry. He was glad that the Government had, at least, realised the necessity for one step—the nationalisation of royalties—but under this bill the royalty owners would continue to receive royalties for another four and a half years equivalent to nearly twenty millions of further toll in the industry. In the long run, the greater portion of the money paid as compensation would be a charge on the wages of the miners. He characterised the new Coal Commission as a mine-owners' protection society.

The debate was adjourned.

WILL IT CLEAR.—A group of officials at the National Cup coursing meeting waiting in the rain at Dunshaughlin yesterday. They are: Mr. D. Dunne, Mr. G. Hutchinson (I.C.C.), Mr. T. Aherne and Mr. J. Griffin. Top (left): The Judge, Mr. Maurice Davin, explaining later that the meeting had been postponed.

THE COMMITTEE which is organising the first dance to be held in aid of the Benevolent Fund of the Pharmaceutical Society of Ireland at the Gresham Hotel on December 6. Included are: Mr. B. P. Hickey (President of the Society), Mr. P. G. Cahill (Vice-President), and Mr. G. O'Neill (Chairman of the Committee).

RAILWAYS' STAFF DANCE

The Great Southern Railways' annual dance, held under the patronage of Sir Walter Nugent, Bart. (chairman), and board of directors, with Mr. W. H. Morton (general manager), president, and the chief officers of the company as vice-presidents, will be held on Monday next in the Gresham Hotel, and promises to be, as in previous years, one of the outstanding social events of the season.

A feature of these dances has been the presentation of many valuable prizes, and on the occasion of the forthcoming function it is the intention to present numerous spot prizes of a most acceptable nature.

The proceeds of the dance are given to the Irish branch of the Railway Benevolent Institution, of which Mr. P. J. Floyd, traffic manager, is chairman. This institution provides for the necessitous widows of railwaymen, maintains and educates their orphan children, and provides annuities and allowances to widows and members who, through old age, disease or accident, are unable any longer to work for their living.

A very energetic and enthusiastic committee are busily engaged making the final preparations, and nothing will be left undone to ensure that those attending the dance have a most enjoyable night.

To prevent overcrowding the committee have decided to limit the sale of tickets, and, as there is only a small number remaining unsold, those who desire to attend the function—admission to which is by ticket only—should, if they have not already done so, purchase their requirements at the earliest possible moment.

GOSSIP FROM THE COURSE

THE CALL-OVER

Huxley's Good Win : Pharsala Scores a Narrow Success

FROM OUR TRAVELLING CORRESPONDENT.

LONDON, Monday Night.

THE betting on the Manchester November Handicap still hangs fire, and there was not a great deal doing at the call-over to-night. I expect, however, that there will be good business in the ring on the day, for the race seems to open up endless possibilities for speculation.

F. Armstrong did not exactly get a line to the form when his French colt, Domaha, won at Lingfield on Saturday, but the colt won so easily and showed himself such a useful one, and, furthermore, at the top of his form, that he could tell him something about his runner on Saturday, Sir Edmund Bushby's Nectar II., who is also French-bred.

Nectar II. has been unplaced on four occasions since he won the Northumberland Plate at Newcastle. In that race he made all the running, and just won from Signature, who was receiving 11lb. That ranks as a good performance.

Failed at Castle Irwell

Against Nectar II. there is the circumstance that one of the places was the Prince Edward Handicap on this same Castle Irwell course. After he had led the field for nearly two miles there he dropped right out.

Manchester is a course on which a horse can make his own running and win. We have seen so many cases, especially at this back end, of the horse that is first into the straight leading for the rest of the way. Fewer horses come from behind there and win than on any other course in England.

It is possible now that Lord Glanely may rely on his Derby Cup winner, Marcus Superbus, with his 8lb. penalty, instead of the undependable Inglefield. Supposing he were to start both, I imagine that Marcus Superbus would be the better favourite.

His penalty puts him at a disadvantage with Rasibus, who was finishing fast close up in the Derby Cup. This was easily the best performance which Rasibus has shown here since he came from France, where he won five races as a three-year-old and was placed in two others.

On his running last Friday he should finish close up, and one can expect to see him a well-backed candidate.

Firm Going Likely

The present indications are that the ground would not be soft on Saturday, for rain is not indicated in the forecast. Firm ground would be all against the chance of such as Solitaire, who has been mentioned in the betting, and is one of several round which Northern bones are centring.

Firm going, too, would be against the chance of Atout Royal, who has been doing most of his racing in the North since he came from France.

I referred yesterday to there having been 42 runners for the Manchester November Handicap in the year that "North Drift won." This was exactly half an error. North Drift only divided the stake with Redeswood!

The new favourite is Velvet Cushion, who, as I noted yesterday, is well fancied by his trainer. The best price at the close was 2½ to 2. Rasibus was second favourite at 100 to 8 and Nectar II. and Severino were each quoted at 100 to 7.

Some people agree that Marcus Superbus may be started, and he had a quotation—20 to 1. Another at this price was Stainless Stephen, who ran well in the Derby Cup. Atout Royal had a mention at 22 to 1, but this business generally was not informative.

Four Winners for G. Richards

Cold weather, unpleasant showers, and a bad light made racing this afternoon at Warwick, where a three day meeting began, an occasion for shudders. But four of Gordon Richards's five mounts were winners, so it was a poor heart that did not rejoice, especially as two of his winners were clear favourites, and the other two joint favourites.

The most important of them was Mr. Dewar's Huxley, from Beckhampton, who had a clear market call of Castel St. Angelo in the colours of the local owner, Mrs. Arthur James, in the Dawkins Handicap.

Huxley was well behind as they came into the straight, but under vigorous pressure, made up a good deal of ground in the short run-in to challenge Greymantle and beat him by half a length.

The latter belongs to Mr. R. Dand, a former amateur rider, who has acted handicapper in the north, and inspector of race courses.

Caught on the Post

He only keeps a few horses in training, and has had bad luck with them lately, for his Peel Tower was only caught on the post in the Derby Cup last week after making all the running, and beaten a short head by Marcus Superbus. Elmstead was beaten h.d.; length for second place here.

Huxley was brought from France by the Aly Khan to give him his usual winning ride at the Bibury Club meeting, and was later sold to Mr. J. A. Dewar, for whom he has done well.

Richards's three other winning rides were on horses trained by Frank Hartigan. The first of them was Mr. Schwob's Salamine II., an odds-on chance, in the opening race, the Rugby Selling Plate, which he won by a length from Princess Sonny.

Then he rode a loser, the 10 to 1 chance, Salmon Rod, who was unplaced in the Bourton Selling Plate, which 8. Wootton's Pharsala won by a head from Starred.

Blue Car's Win

After Huxley he rode Two Rivers, who won the Leycester Plate by four lengths from Paracelsus. His last ride was Blue Car for Mr. V. Thompson in the Offchurch Plate. The six-year-old, who knows this course so well, was a comfortable winner by a length from Sequalo.

The last race being an apprentices' event, the champion was looking on. In this the Liverpool winner, Capelgill, who was an 11 to 4 chance here, beat Salena and Toward Point, the latter of whom was first favourite.

Bookmakers felt the pinch to-day, five of the winners being either clear or joint first favourites, and Capelgill was a good second favourite. After the frost and some snow the horses were kicking up the dirt.

Selections

It is likely that there will be troops of runners here again to-morrow, when the Coventry Plate may be won by PEEL TOWER, or in his absence by Senior.

The Daventry Maiden Plate may go to POME and the Banbury Plate to KASSAR.

PEEL TOWER FANCIED

J'Accours Preferred for Shipston Plate

THERE will be a good field out for the Coventry Plate, decided over one and a quarter miles, at Warwick to-day. The going, which was distinctly soft for the opening day, will probably have a big bearing on the result. Of those with chances I take Peel Tower as the best to stand. The Malton horse ran surprisingly well when narrowly beaten by Marcus Superbus in the Derby Cup. He looked a winner all over in that race when he entered the straight in front. He was not disgraced in being caught by the winner, and he should now go one better.

Higher up the scale is Outbreak, who must be considered. He is a useful horse, and, though he failed when heavily backed at Chepstow, he is expected to run much better now. He should get the distance here all right.

Orphan Duckling won over the distance at Folkestone, and, though the class is now stronger, she should not be far away. No Parking, who was third in the corresponding race last year, is in with a light weight, but the eight-year-old has shown comparatively poor form since winning a mile race early in the season at Bogside.

Senior has been showing sound running in his recent engagements and has obvious claims on his third to Canteener and Galsonia at Leicester. A reproduction of that form should see him well to the fore.

The Bore, who won over the course at the last meeting here before failing at Leicester, is the best of the others engaged, but should not trouble the selection,

PEEL TOWER.

The Banbury Plate has also a good look about it. Frank Hartigan will saddle Alarm Bell in preference to Chapardeuse. The colt has not won a race this season, but his chance appears to have come now. I liked the way he was running at the finish when unplaced to Capelgill at Liverpool. He should do better over the mile.

The Wagon was a winner over the distance at Brighton. The gelding was never stretched there, and I look to him giving a close race. Tap Dancer has disappointed in many of his races, and will need to show much better form than he did at Haydock Park last month. Tweed'edee appears to have too much weight, but Hrymfax has a chance on his best form.

THE EPHESIAN

should be capable of winning the Daventry Maiden Plate. He had not the best of luck when fourth to Pactolus in a similar event at Leicester. Had he got into his running a little quicker he might have won. I take him to make amends.

Pome, who was second to Walkure at Thirsk, is the chief danger. The filly has a good turn of speed, and she will come near scoring her first success. Dunkeld, Miss America and Striptease are the best of the remainder.

The Shipston Plate has a most open appearance, but I think I have named the winner in J'ACCOURS.

The colt has been prominent in most of his races this season. He won narrowly at Windsor, and he looks good enough to score again.

Theobald's Green was third to Palette and Tom Cringle at Windsor. If anything beats J'Accours it may be Fred Darling's charge. I doubt, however, if he has the finishing pace of J'Accours.

CHEESE EYE

is best for the Sunriving Selling Plate, may take the Avon Selling Plate.

HUNTING

WARD UNION HOUNDS

AN ELEVEN-MILE POINT

The Ward Hounds continued a remarkable sequence when on Saturday, after meeting at Rathgate, they brought off yet another great hunt. In the absence of the Master Mr. Mangan was in command, and the enlargement took place at Ballymadun, by invitation of Mr. Bartley. Going away across the Milking Banks hounds bore right-handed for Knockaneek, and went on by The Folly to Wyestown. They checked in Cottrellstown, but hitting off the line again near the quarry they settled down to hunt very fast and very straight to Wyanstown, and along the river by Leastown and Wespalstown to The Murrogh. From here they ran through Barnanstown, and crossing the Naul road at Mr. Early's house at Bealinstown went on by Cookstown to Roscall, then swinging right-handed through Brownstown for Magillstown ran by Little Lissen Hall to the main Belfast road at Sunday Well bridge. They crossed the road here, and meeting a bit of country seldom hunted by this pack, and none too easy to ride, continued on by Ballymadrough down to the very edge of the Malahide estuary at Newport. With the tide full in it was fortunate that the hind turned inland again for Miss Hely-Hutchinson's demesne at Seafield, and was there safely captured.

The time of this hunt was an hour and forty-five minutes, and the point just short of eleven miles, right across the whole width of County Dublin.

LOUTH HOUNDS

We had a disappointing day at Duleek on the 17th, our good run of sport being marred by bad scent and the difficulty of finding foxes, so nothing much of note was done.

There were several foxes on foot at Rathescar on Saturday, but acent was very bad, and they had to be left. The new covert, Hammondstown, near Dunleer, held a brace, and one was hunted for thirty minutes over the road to Janeville, then back close to the covert, where he found a hole. A twisting fox from Tenure gorse got to ground after being hunted in rings all round the covert. We then had a long jog on to Carrickmageough. Finding at once, hounds ran fast down the hill, and then straight nearly to Collon village, where they swung left-handed, and coming back by Mount Oriel sunk the valley and hunted to the top of Dunmore hill, where they were stopped at dusk after a good hunt of fifty minutes.

NORTH KILDARE HARRIERS

From the meet at Laragh Gate, Roanstown, which was first tried, provided a hare that went away by Gragadda nearly to Threadstown, when she turned back, and was eventually lost on Mr. Hannaway's farm. A hare found in Laragh led past the fox covert to the Screens, and, crossing the Laragh river, faced as if for Lady Chapel, but wheeled back over the river to Laragh, and, following several local rings, she was killed. Time—45 minutes. They next found on Mr. Flood's farm, and ran through Clonfert into Graig, where they bowled the quarry over.

ROWING

UNIVERSITY COLLEGE NOVICES' RACES

University College, Dublin, Boat Club held its annual Novices' Pair Races for the Butler Cup on Saturday and Sunday last. The entry was large, and racing of a high standard for the time of year. Messrs. J. Nolan and G. Egan proved the victors after an exciting final, in which both crews were level practically to the finish.

The following crews have been selected for the coming season:—

Senior Eight—V. G. Doyle (cox.), M. J. Hickey (stk.), J. P. Gannon (7), C. J. Gannon (6), W. F. MacGuire (5), G. J. Frost (4), J. F. MacDermott (3), J. O'Mara (2), D. J. Pierse (bow).

Junior Eight—A. O'Doherty (cox.), P. J. van Miert (stk.), B. A. Cousins (7), S. D. Daly (6), T. Meade (5), F. A. Hynes (4), M. F. Cooney (3), S. Gannon (2), A. S. Johnson (bow).

LONDON BETTING

VELVET CUSHION FAVOURITE

NOVEMBER HANDICAP CALL-OVER

There was very little interest taken in the call-over of the Manchester November Handicap card at the Victoria Club, London, yesterday. The only candidates worthy of mention were Velvet Cushion, Rasibus, Mickey Mouse, and Madeira Knight.

Velvet Cushion, who was an 18 to 1 chance at the previous call-over, is now favourite at 10½ to 1, and was supported to win £4,500.

There was no mention of Lord G'anely's Inglefield, but his Derby Cup winner, Marcus Superbus, was quietly backed at 22 to 1. There was no support for Nectar II. or Severino, and Rasibus became second favourite at 100 to 8, being backed to win £2,500.

Mickey Mouse was supported to win £3,000 at 22 to 1, leaving 20 to 1 the best offer; and Madeira Knight was noticed to win £2,000.

TIPPERARY CUP DRAW

Kilsheelin Meeting Receives Excellent Support

EXCELLENT support has been extended by owners to the Tipperary Cup meeting to be held to-morrow and Thursday at Kilsheelan under the auspices of the Clonmel and Kilsheelan and Carrick Clubs.

First of the cup stakes to be instituted after the Irish Cup, the event for some seasons lost much of its early attractions, and it dwindled to the proportions of a sixteen-dog stake, but the amalgamation of the two clubs brought about a strong revival, and the former prestige of the fixture has been restored.

Several distinctly smart performers are in the Cup, including Jaunty Rake, who in the deciding course last season was beaten by Dorothy Dainty; the Connaught Cup winner, Top Speed, and Just Reputation, beaten in the fourth round last November by Jaunty Rake. The latter is in the top half, and Top Speed in the second sixteen. Wily Councillor, runner-up to Keel Ruby for the Cork Cup in December, and Laurel Road are also entered, but those who saw Top Speed at Loughrea will have every confidence in his ability to get to the end of the stake.

The first brace will be in slips at 11.45 to-morrow, when the Cup and the two trial stakes will be run through twice.

THE NATIONAL CUP WASHED OUT

RAINSTORM CAUSES POSTPONEMENT

BY OUR COURSING CORRESPONDENT.

The fates have been very unkind to the National Cup meeting this season. Down by thirteen, the Cup stake reached a "record low" with nineteen entries, and yesterday morning, at Dunshaughlin, after six courses had been decided and four byes run off, the rainstorm left the Stewards with no option but to apply the closure.

About a few dozen braved the elements, and would have stuck it out, but the beaters presented a deplorable spectacle when they finished the second beat, and only the most unreasonable and unsportsmanlike would have asked them to continue.

We resume at Grange this morning at 9.30 with the second round of the Cup, and, if possible, that stake will be run out, whatever may occur in the others.

Strange to say, the hares slipped at gave the finest of trials. They were regular stags, and, generally, the handicap for the second round is about equal. The most stylish display of the lot was given by Clongorey Lass in her spin with Brown Spar; and Flynn's Own, winner of the Clarke Cup last season, ran an excellent bye, but the longest course of the six was run by Keelireheen Boy and Rove and Go, the former of whom put in a lot of strong work at the finish.

NATIONAL CUP—For 19 all-ages. Winner, £80; second, £30; one dog, £15; two dogs, £5.

Mr. J. Shaw's Song of Erin (11) beat Mr. R. Moreland's Model Rusby.

Mr. C. Coogan ns. Tailte Rose, a bye; Mr. H. Lewis ns. Athy Cutlet, absent.

Mr. W. Mahon ns. Clongorey Lass (4), beat Mr. T. Morris ns. Brown Spar.

Mr. D. Dunne ns. Dublin Jack, a bye; Mr. M. Brown ns. Town Champion, absent.

GREYHOUND RACING

LEMON PRODUCE SPEEDY

BENEFIT MEETING AT SHELBOURNE PARK

A large attendance patronised Shelbourne Park last night when a benefit meeting was held for a deserving charity. The racing was keen and interesting, and Lemon Produce, in winning the Quick Result Sweepstake, put up a splendid performance. In the final he was badly away, and was last for more than half the distance, but coming through rounding the bend for home, he put in a great burst and beat Chest Warmer by two lengths. Details:—

ANOTHER WIN FOR SERVICES

LANSDOWNE BACKS FAIL TO TAKE CHANCES

ALDERSHOT SERVICES	14
LANSDOWNE	3

Aldershot Services concluded their short Irish tour when, on the back ground at Lansdowne road yesterday, they defeated Lansdowne by 1 goal 1 penalty goal and 2 tries to 1 penalty goal.

The visitors were the better side, but the score rather flattered them; for during most of the second half Lansdowne did nearly all the pressing, and were unlucky not to have got one or two other scores. The heavier Services' forwards gave their backs plenty of chances in the first half, but they only scored one try, and that a rather lucky one, got by Hardman, which was not converted. C. A. Boyle responded for Lansdowne with a penalty goal from far out, and just before the close of the half Troop put Services ahead again with a penalty goal from near the touch line. There was no further score until the second half was well advanced, when a Lansdowne back movement which promised well broke down, and Marriott, intercepting, raced three-quarters the length of the ground to ground the ball under the posts, and Troop had no difficulty about adding the extra points. In another breakaway by the Services' backs shortly afterwards Marriott crossed again, but the try was not improved upon.

Considering how many substitutes were on the Lansdowne side, they made a good showing, the forwards, especially in the second half, well holding the strong opposition. Grieve, the old Scottish international, played a sound game at out-half for the visitors, and Marriott and Powell-Brett were other useful backs, while of the forwards Troop, Burrows and Kealy were best.

Murphy had a heavy job to fill as full back for Lansdowne, and got his side out of innumerable difficulties, while one breakaway of his should have led to a score but for a missed pass. Dawson, at centre three-quarter, was also good, and Cagney was the better wing. Of a good bustling pack Boyle Purcell and Sutherland were best. Teams:—

Aldershot Services—J. Halford; D. Blanchford, D. P. Carry, J. H. Marriott, F. Powell-Brett; C. G. Grieve, H. N. Daniels; J. L. Troop, Corporal Evans, Private Burrows, Lance-Corporal Ramsay, J. B. Kealy, J. B. France, Sapper Hardman, R. H. Bellamy.

Lansdowne—C. Murphy; H. Tunney, W. Dawson, F. Cosgrave, J. Cagney; J. McMennamin, D. Toomey; C. Boyle, J. Beglan, B. Demery, G. B. Jackson, F. Sutherland, D. Purcell, M. Homan, T. Sinnott.

Referee—Mr. J. C. Boucher.

TEAMS FOR THE FIRST ENGLISH TRIAL

The teams for the first England international trial match, to be played at Gosforth, Newcastle-on-Tyne, on Saturday, December 4, will be:—

ENGLAND.

Full-back—R. A. Gerrard (Bath).

Three-quarters—E. J. Unwin (Rosslyn Park), P. Cranmer (Moseley), P. L. Candler (St. Bartholomew's Hospital), and R. B. Horsley (Harlequins).

Half-backs—W. S. Kemble (Harlequins) and J. L. Giles (Coventry).

Forwards—R. J. Longland (Northampton), H. B. Toft (Waterloo), H. F. Wheatley (Coventry), A. Wheatley (Coventry), T. F. Huskisson (Old Merchant Taylors), E. Hamilton-Hill (Harlequins), C. Thompson (Harlequins), and W. H. Weston (Northampton).

POSSIBLES.

Full-back—H. J. M. Uren (Waterloo).

Three-quarters—L. A. Booth (Headingley), F. M. McRae (St. Mary's Hospital), R. Leyland (Aldershot Services), and R. H. Guest (Liverpool University).

Half-backs—J. R. Auty (Headingley) and B. C. Gadney (Headingley).

Forwards—R. E. Prescott (Harlequins), A. P. Hughes (Birkenhead Park), G. T. Dancer (Bedford), D. W. Standeven (Halifax), D. Cummins (Bristol), A. Seaton (Coventry), J. R. Spear (Durham University), and J. Waggott (Westoe).

WELCH REGIMENT WINS ARMY CUP MATCH

WELCH REGT. A. 22 S.W. BORDERERS 0

The First Battalion Welch Regiment (Belfast), holders of the Army Cup, passed into the second round at Ravenhill, Belfast, yesterday afternoon, when they defeated the Second Battalion South Wales Borderers (Londonderry) by 2 goals and 4 tries to nil.

The handling of the Welch backs was much more accurate, and they displayed greater resource, Lance-Corporal Ibbitson at out-half playing splendidly, while Lieutenant Cowey, a former Welsh international wing, and Private Delaney, were fast and elusive centres.

The first time the ball went to touch, in the first minute of the game, the Welch scrummaged it and heeled, the ball going to Delaney, who went through for a try, which Sergeant Owen could not convert. Soon afterwards Thomas was nearly in, and from the scrummage Powell put on a second try, which Owen did not goal. Borderers' forwards did well during this half, but the backs were unable to get over. In the opening minutes of the second half Cowey broke away and kicked ahead for Delaney, with a great burst of speed, to get past the defence and score, Owen converted. Later Ibbitson, who played brilliantly at out-half, cut through and sent Lieutenant Cowey over, but Owen sent wide. Cowey scored another try, which Owen goaled, and near the end Roberts got an unconverted try.

MORE CHANGES FOR TRIAL MATCH

G. J. Morgan, who broke a finger playing for Old Belvedere against Blackrock on Saturday, has had to declare off the Blues side for the Leinster trial match at Lansdowne road to-morrow. His place will be taken by C. Fox (Wanderers). P. Crowe and L. B. McMahon have also declared off, and their places will be taken by G. Quinn (Old Belvedere) and O. G. Horrigan (London-Irish), the latter being moved from the Whites side. The vacancy caused by Horrigan's promotion has not yet been filled.

PORTORA R.S. V. COLERAINE A.I.

Played at Derry on Saturday. Coleraine kicked off, and immediately the Portora forwards brought play into the Coleraine half. However, they could not penetrate the defence, and clever rushes by Coleraine soon reversed matters. The first score came after about twenty minutes, when a Coleraine centre crossed, the try being converted. Just before half-time Coleraine added another unconverted try.

In the second half, after some fast and even play, Milligan kicked a penalty for Portora. Play continued to be very even, until five minutes from full time the ball burst and further play became impossible. Result:—

Coleraine A.I.—1 goal 1 try (8 points).
Portora R.S.—1 penalty goal (3 points).

SCHOOLS' MATCH.

Played at Drogheda. Earlsfort House School (Senior XV.), 8 points; Drogheda Grammar School (Senior XV.), 20 points.

BADMINTON

NORTHERN SUPREMACY

The Irish Team to Play Wales: A Coaching Committee

BY OUR SPECIAL CORRESPONDENT.

THE interprovincial match between the Midland and Northern Branches was played at Dundalk on Saturday night, and the experiment of staging a contest of that importance in the County Louth town proved a success. The attendance was excellent, all arrangements were carried through in the efficient manner for which the Dundalk Executive is noted, and everyone enjoyed the evening's play.

MRS. MACNAUGHTON.

Of course, from the Midland point of view, there was a fly in the ointment, the Northern team maintaining the supremacy they have established in recent years, and winning with ease by nine matches to two. The only thing that can be said about that is that the Midlands came off a little better than last season, when they could only capture one of the eleven individual matches.

MISS WILSON IN FORM

The only Midland winners last season were Mrs. MacNaughton and Miss N. Stoker, who won their doubles against Mrs. Swann and Miss Hall. Last Saturday the Midland pair were beaten by the Misses Wilson and Hall in a desperately fought match. They were clearly short of match-play practice, but the Northern girls played finely. Miss Wilson, who won the Irish open women's singles championship a few years ago, was the dominant figure, her grand retrieving and general pace about the court being notable. Miss Hall, a young and rapidly-improving player, supported her with great steadiness. They are a good pair.

The Northerners were behind in the first game, but drew up to win it at 17-14. Again in the second game they pulled back a considerable lead, but drew level at 13-all. However, after leading at 2-love, they let the set go at 15-18. They took a hard-fought third game for the match at 15-12.

MIDLANDERS' BEST PERFORMANCE

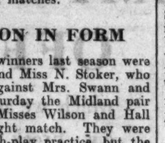
The Misses G. Carty and N. Conway had a splendid win in the other women's doubles, only dropping two points in each game of a straight win. Though neither of the Midland ladies is new to inter-provincial conflict, this is probably their best performance so far. Miss Conway followed up the success by being on of another winning partnership in the mixed doubles, in which she and the Glenageary player, J. S. Wilson, beat H. A. Montgomery and Miss Forsythe in two games. Miss Conway belongs to the Pembroke and Glenageary clubs, and it must have been a close thing between her and Miss Hall for the position of substitute on the Irish team to oppose Wales next month.

Generally speaking, the Northern men were too strong for the Midland representatives, but the ladies of the latter team appeal as distinctly the more dangerous force and the defeat of Mrs. MacNaughton and Miss Stoker may be regarded as one that would have been unlikely to happen later in the season.

THE IRISH TEAM

Subsequently the Irish team to oppose Wales at Llandudno on Friday of next week, December 3rd, was selected. It is:—

Men—T. H. Boyle, Ian Maconachie (captain), J. W. McGarry, M. McGarry, T. Orr, J. L. Rankin.



MISS O. WILSON.

Women—Mrs. MacNaughton, Miss N. Stoker, Miss O. Wilson. Substitutes—A. G. Trapnell and Miss Hall.

The team is on the lines of those which have done duty for the last few years. Each member has several times played for Ireland. Maconachie, Boyle and Rankin, the latter of whom won the three available Irish open championship titles last season, are all up to the best international standard. The others have come on to the side more recently, and are still a bit behind in class, but Trapnell is the only one who could seriously challenge their position, and they are getting plenty of experience.

WORTHY SELECTIONS

It is hoped that in time they will come up to the desired class. With regard to the ladies, the three picked are decidedly the best we have. Mrs. MacNaughton and Miss Stoker, though beaten in the Interprovincial match on Saturday, are the holders of the open and close Irish women's doubles titles, and Miss Wilson is decidedly the next best we have.

Trapnell and Miss Hall are to be congratulated on gaining the recognition of being picked as substitutes. Trapnell has been in the running for international honours for some time. In November, 1934, when the Midland branch had its last win over the Northern branch, he beat J. W. McGarry, and with Miss D. Good he was also a winner in the mixed doubles, T. Orr and Miss Gillespie being defeated. Yet the brothers McGarry and T. Orr have been preferred to him ever since by the Irish selectors. Last year in the Interprovincial he gave T. H. Boyle a hard run in the singles, but on Saturday at Dundalk J. McGarry beat him in straight games. He did not produce his best form on that occasion, but, on the whole, it is surprising that he has not before now worked his way to the top. As mentioned in connection with the Interprovincial, Miss Hall is a young and clever player, and International honours have clearly been on the road to her for some time.

FREE COACHING

The defeat of the Midlands once more reminds us of the necessity of doing something to improve the standard of play. A move in that direction has been made by the appointment of a coaching committee. The members of it are willing to go to any club which so desires and give free coaching. Clubs desiring to benefit by this should communicate with one of the committee, who are:—Miss E. Stewart, 2 de Vesci terrace, Dun Laoghaire, Co. Dublin; Miss N. Stoker, 23 Westland row, Dublin; Mr. C. H. Maidment, St. Patrick's, Dalkey, Co. Dublin; Mr. A. G. Trapnell, 77 Pembroke road, Dublin.

The Midland League continues to progress at a good rate, and a number of results in Division A have come to hand since last week. In A1, Sandford heavily defeated Pembroke "A" by eight matches clear. The losers are by no means so strong as last season. They miss Trapnell and Mrs. Trapnell and Miss Carty, who are playing in the league with Gas Company, though they continue members of Pembroke. In addition, L. Green has not so far played any league badminton, so the side is much depleted as compared with last season.

They had, however, a good win against St. Philips, 5-3. Gas Company opened their campaign in A1 by beating Epworth, 8-0. In A 2 Dalkey and Ailesbury played a draw, 4-4, and Glenageary, strengthened by the inclusion of the Misses N. and P. Conway, beat Dalkey, 8-0.

SENIOR CUP FEATURES

A Big Total by Muckross: Trinity Show Promise

BY OUR SPECIAL CORRESPONDENT.

MUCKROSS I., in their opening Cup match, scored what must be a record for Senior Hockey, when they defeated Optimists II. by 19 goals to nil. Whether this high scoring is good for hockey is open to doubt, but in Saturday's game it could not be avoided. Only two players on the Optimists' team appeared able to cope with the Muckross forwards, and they, without support, could do little or nothing to stem the rush. Miss Joan White, the international forward, scored seven goals; Miss Strahan accounted for five while the remainder were split between Miss Bourke (4) and Miss B. White (3). Optimists were completely outplayed, although Miss Hartigan and Miss C. Smith did their utmost against enormous odds.

MISS J. WHITE.

After a very close first half, at Sydney Parade, in which it looked anyone's game, Pembroke Wanderers eventually defeated Dublin University by 5 goals to 1. I have rarely seen Wanderers take so long to settle down, and, for a great part of the match it looked as if Trinity, who fielded two substitutes in the forward line, would hold them. During the second half, however, Wanderers improved, and, after they obtained a lead, they se

FOOD AND PRODUCE MARKETS

Birkenhead—Improved trade for Beef, and moderate request for Lambs. Merklands—Good demand for Cattle. London—Wheat cargoes steadier, Tin and Copper firm, and Rubber quiet.

CATTLE.

BIRKENHEAD DEAD MEAT.—There was better selling trade for beef yesterday, particularly for the rougher descriptions. Best small sides made up to 7½d., medium sides 6¾d. to 7d., heavy sides 6½d. There was a moderate trade for lambs at 9d to 9½d. for the carcases, a few of exceptional quality making shade more money.

MANCHESTER PIG.—Shipments from Ireland to this country for week ended November 13th totalled 4,650, as compared with 4,148 in the previous week, and 3,165 at the corresponding period last year. The short supplies of pigs available on spot met with a steady clearance, and prices rule firm and dearer. Lean cutters 15/- to 15/6, sizeable baconers 14/6, choice sows 10/6 to 11/- per score estimated dressed carcase weight.

LONDON (METROPOLITAN).—No market held owing to foot-and-mouth disease.

BIRMINGHAM PIG.—The week opened with supplies still on the short side. A good demand again reported. Market firmer all round. Quotations—Sizeable bacons 14/6, cutters 14/6, sows 11/- per score dead-weight.

MERKLANDS.—250 fat Irish bullocks, 30 bulls. Full average quality. Good demand. Best quality bullocks in demand up to 42/-, current 36/- upwards. Bulls unchanged. Values between 27/- and 34/-, all live cwt. Arrivals totalled 1,638 including Dublin 569, Waterford 174, Limerick 127, Cork 93, Sligo 84, Belfast 316, Derry 265.

GRAIN.

FLOATING GRAIN CARGOES (BALTIC).—WHEAT—Following the improvement in week-end overseas cables and reports of a better export demand, the North American grades showed a steadier tone pervaded the floating and forward cargo section. Sellers generally required 3d to 9d. per quarter advance; but United Kingdom millers were slow to respond. No. 1 Northern Manitoba (Atlantic) November sellers 53/-, December 52/9, white Pacific December 37/3, Australian afloat 40/3 to 41/3, new November 40/3, December 40/-, January-February 39/9, Rosafe (63½lb.) January-February 40/5. Parcels mostly dearer, but demand slow. No. 1 Northern Manitoba (Atlantic) December sellers 52/4½. No. 2 ditto 50/10½, No. 3 ditto 44/4½, No. 4 ditto 41/6; No. 1 ditto (Vancouver) December 53/3, No. 2 ditto 50/9, No. 3 ditto 44½, white Pacific December 37/6. No. 2 hard winter (sample) afloat 38/9, December 39/3. Australian afloat 41/-, Rosafe (63lb.) January February 40/9, Russian (sample) afloat 37/3 to 41/6 per quarter of 480lb. c.i.f. terms. MAIZE—Cargoes steadier in sympathy with wheat and better week-end Argentine advices but demand slow to improve. Plate afloat sellers 28/9, November 28/10½, December 29/-, January 29/1½, February 29/3. No. 2 yellow American Gulf December-January 26/6. Parcels firm. Plate November also December sellers 28/1½ per quarter of 480lb. c.i.f. BARLEY steady. Parcels of No. 3 Canadian Western (Atlantic) December sellers 27/10½, Iranian December-January also February 26/-. Plate January-February 26/- per quarter of 400lb. c.i.f. OATS maintained. Parcels of Plate Feb.-March sellers 16/6. No. 1 Canadian feed (Atlantic) November 25/- per quarter of 320lb. c.i.f.

MARK LANE CORN.—There was a good attendance of buyers at the week's opening market, and a fair business resulted at occasionally easier prices. WHEAT easier, especially for Canadian grade. No. 1 Northern Manitoba (Atlantic) 55/9, No. 2 ditto 54/3, No. 3 ditto 46/9, No. 4 ditto 44/9, Australian 43/, Karachi 44/6, Russian on sample 43/3, 44/3 per quarter of 496lb. English at farm new 39/- to 40/- per quarter of 504lb. FLOUR quiet and easier. Home-milled reduced by 2/6 per sack. London stratford run 38/6 for delivery in home counties and 38/- inner London area, country straights 31/- delivered Manitoba patents 38/- to 39/6. Australian ditto 31/6 to 32/- per sack. MAIZE steady (including quota payment 6d. per sack). MAIZE maintained. Plate landed 30/-, ex ship 29/-. November 29/-, December 29/3, January 29/6, February 29/9 per quarter of 400lb
